

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. MOONEY. BRIEF LAT. GRAM.

PREFACE

THE author of this book feels that there is an imperative need for such a brief manual of Latin Grammar as the French, and, more particularly, the Germans, have had for years. Such a manual, intended primarily for use in secondary schools, can be made brief by omitting exceptional usages and by reducing the usual array of quotations to a minimum. It can be simplified by stating the leading facts of the language clearly and concisely. The present work, designed to cover the ground mentioned, is largely the outgrowth of practical experience in the class-room. Everywhere the effort has been made to state material points only, and to give these in the simplest and most direct way. The work has been further condensed and simplified by the use of typographical devices in the form of summaries and tables. The examples given are few, and are taken from the classics usually read first by the student. It is assumed that a single example which clearly illustrates the principle stated is worth more to the student than a number of sentences on no one of which his attention is concentrated. The Index of Grammatical References (p. 239) is intended to facilitate the use of this manual in connection with texts referring to the standard Latin Grammars.

In quantity, Lindsay's Latin Language has been taken as a standard in doubtful cases. The sources consulted are many, and embrace the standard grammars of our own country, England, Germany, and France. The author would make especial mention of the Ellendt-Seyffert Grammar, from which, by the kind permission of Doctor Seyffert, he has drawn much of his best material. His object has been to cover at least as much ground as is embraced in that admirable manual, intended for use in the German gymnasium. Doctor Seyffert's consent to allow a liberal use of his matter was so freely given that it deserves more than passing mention.

Chancellor James H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University, Vice-Chancellor B. L. Wiggins, of the University of the South, Mr. C. W. Bain, of the Sewanee Grammar School, Professor James H. Dillard, of Tulane University, and Professor G. F. Nicolassen, of the Southwestern Presbyterian University, have all read the book in manuscript form, and all have made helpful suggestions. Professor Dillard and Professor Nicolassen have read the proof of the entire work, and their watchful care and critical scholarship have given the book a large measure of whatever merit it may possess. The author returns his sincerest thanks to all of these friends for the aid so generously given, and to the editorial force for their uniform consideration.

LETTERS, SOUNDS, ACCENT

THE ALPHABET

1. The Latin Alphabet differs from the English only in having no w.

2. Vowels. — The Vowels are a, e, i, o, u, and y. I and u have also a consonant use, but only before a vowel; consonant i may be written j, but is ordinarily not distinguished from vowel i; consonant u is usually written v.

3. Diphthongs. — The union of two vowels into one sound forms Double Vowels or Diphthongs. The ordinary diphthongs are ae, oe, au; the occasional, ei, eu, ui.

4. Consonants. — The remaining sounds are Consonants. The Double Consonants are x (= gs or cs) and z (= ds).

NOTE. — Y and z occur only in foreign words; K is found only in Kaesō, Kalendae: KA [= capitālis], KK [= castrōrum], Kar [= Karthāgō], and a few other abbreviations.

ROMAN PRONUNCIATION

5. Vowels.

ā = a in father

ē = a in say (without glide)

ī = ee in seen (without glide)

ō = o in go (without glide)

ū = oo in boot (without glide)

ǣ = a in wash

ĕ = e in set

ĭ = i in sin

ŏ = o in for

ŭ = oo in foot

y = German ü, but inclining to ɨ

NOTE. — Some of the sounds have no exact English equivalents, but those given above are approximately close.

6. Diphthongs.—To pronounce diphthongs, the constituent vowels should be uttered as rapidly as possible. This will give approximately:—

au = ou in our ae = ai in aisle ei = ei in feint (drawled) eu = eu in feud oe = oi in oil ui = we

7. Consonants.—C and g are hard, as in cat and go; consonant i (j) = y; v = w in win; r is trilled; s is sharp, as in hiss; t is hard, as in tin; x is always hard, as in tax. Final m before a word beginning with a vowel is slurred; n before c, g, q has the sound of ng in sing; bs and bt have the sounds of ps and pt; ch, ph, th are sounded as c, p, t, followed by an aspirate: compare inkhorn, loophole, courthouse. The remaining letters are pronounced as in English.

VOWEL CHANGES

9. 1. In compounds ǣ becomes ǣ before two consonants or a final consonant: rapiō, correptus; pariō, compertus; faciō, effectus; canō, cornicen.

ǣ becomes ɪ before ng: frangere, perfringere.

ǣ becomes ɪ before a single consonant, but not before r: rapiō, abripiō.

ǣ becomes u before labials or before l with another consonant: capiō, occupō; calcō, inculcō.

ǣ as the final vowel of the stem becomes ɪ before suffixes that begin with a consonant: doma-, domitor.

ae usually becomes ɪ, and au sometimes becomes ū or ō: exquirō for exquaerō; disclūdō for disclaudō.

2. ǣ is often found in early Latin, where ɪ is found in later: semul for simul.

In suffixes, before suffixes, before a single consonant, and in the final syllable of a word, it becomes ɪ: ille, illic; cādō, cecidī; decem, undecim.

ǣ before r is often omitted: frāter, frātre.

3. ɪ final may become ǣ: mare for marɪ.

4. ǣ, in syllables not accented, regularly becomes u, except in primitive Latin: servos = servus; dōnom = dōnum; vīvont = vīvunt. Note, also, quom for cum.

5. u, prior to Caesar's period, was found in suffixes commencing with labials. It then became ɪ, which is most usual: māxumus became māximus.

10. 1. Contraction. — Successive vowels may contract. The first regularly predominates and is always long: cōgō for coagō; nīl for nihil; iūnior for iuventor.

2. Parasitic Vowels. — In lingual noun-stems a parasitic u is often developed, and the form thus made takes the place of the ancient form, save in poetry and colloquially: gubernāculum for gubernāclum; ōrāculum for ōrāclum.

3. Syncope.— Sometimes a vowel coming between two consonants is omitted. The most common case is the dropping of a short vowel, particularly i, after an accented syllable: audācter for audāciter; caldus for calidus.

CONSONANT CHANGES — ASSIMILATION

11. 1. A consonant tends to assimilate to a following sound: puella (for puerla); cessi (for cedsi); corruptus (for conruptus).

2. g and b before t or s often become c and p: āgtus = āctus, scribtus = scriptus, scribsi = scripsi.

3. After l or r, t in the suffixes -tor, -tus, -tum becomes s: curtum = cursum.

4. A t-mute before s is dropped; dt or tt become s or ss: cad-tum becomes cāsum; mit-tum becomes missum; virtūt-s becomes virtūs.

5. Final consonants are sometimes omitted: lāc for lāct.

6. m before a dental or a guttural becomes n: quem-dam becomes quendam; prīmceps becomes prīnceps.

7. A guttural with s becomes x: lēgs = lēx.

8. Rhotacism.— An s of the stem becomes r between two vowels: corpus, Gen. corporis.

12. Changes in Prepositions.— When the nature of the two consonants will admit, the final consonant of the preposition is assimilated to the initial consonant of the verb. The most important changes in the prepositions are as follows:—

1. ab before vowels, consonant i, b, d, h, l, n, r, s.

as before p (the b being dropped): asportō.

ā before f in āfui, and before m and v: āmandō, āvertō.

au before f in auferō, aufugiō.

2. ad before vowels, consonant i, b, d, f, h, m, n, q, v;
before n, ad may become an: annuere.

ag and ad before g: aggredior (adg-).

a and ad before gn, so, sp, st: āgnōscō (adgn- or adn-), ascribō (adsc-), aspīrō (adsp-), astringō (adst-).

ad and al before l: adligō (all-).

ap and sometimes ad before p: appōnō (adp-).

ad and ar before r: adripiō (arr-).

ad and as before s: adsentior (ass-).

at and ad before t: attinēre (adt-).

3. com before b, m, p; occasionally con: combūrō, com-memorō, comparō.

con before c, d, f, g, consonant i, n, q, s, t, v: concēdō, condūcō, cōnfirmō, congerō, coniungō, conquīrō, cōnscribō, contegō, convincō.

con and col before l: conligō (coll-).

cor and con before r: corrigō (conr-).

co before vowels and h: coerceō, cohaereō, but comedō and comitor.

cō before gn, and before n where a loss of g has taken place before the n: cōgnōscō.

4. ex before vowels, c, h, p, q, s, t.

ē before b, d, g, consonant i, l, m, n, r, v: ēbulliō, ēdoceō, ēgerō, ēiectus, ēlocō, ēmoveō, ēnītor, ērumpō, ēvocō.

ef (sometimes ec) before f: efferō (better than eferō).

5. in before vowels, h, o, d, f, g (not gn), consonant i, n, q, s, t, v.

in and il before l: inlūcēscō (ill-).

in and ir before r: inrēpō (irr-).

im and in before b, m, p : imbibō (inb-), immergō (inm-), impetrō (inp-).

i before gn : ignōrō.

6. ob before m : obmōlior.

oc before c, of before f, og before g, and op before p : occurrō, offundō, ogganniō, oppleō.

op is often found before s and t; elsewhere ob occurs.

7. per may become pel before l : perlūceō (pell-).

8. sub becomes suc before c, suf before f, sug before g, sub and sum before m, sup before p; sub and sur before r; elsewhere sub occurs : succēdō, sufferō, suggerō, submoveō (summ-), suppetō, subruō (surr-).

9. trāns before vowels, b, c, f, g, p, r, t, v.

trān before sc and usually before s; trānscedō, trānsultō.

trāns and (less often) trā before consonant i, d, l, m, n, and i.

As a rule, unassimilated forms have the preference.

USE OF CAPITALS

13. With capitals begin :—

The first word of each sentence.

Adjectival epithets : Alexander Māgnus, Alexander the Great.

SYLLABLES

14. A word contains as many syllables as it has separate vowels or diphthongs.

1. A consonant between two vowels belongs to the latter; a-mō, I love.

2. Successive consonants between two vowels belong to the latter, if they can begin a syllable; otherwise they are divided: mā-gnus, great; mēn-sa, table.

3. Compounds are divided as their components: dis-trahō, I divide.

NOTE. — If one of two like consonants has been omitted, the one remaining belongs to the syllable that follows: trān-scribō, I copy.

ACCENT

15. 1. Words of two syllables accent the Penult (next to the last syllable): mēn-sa.

2. Words of more than two syllables accent the Penult, if it is long: do-lā-bra, a mattock; otherwise they accent the Antepenult (the syllable before the Penult): dō-mi-nus, master.

3. The syllable preceding the enclitics -ce, -que, -ne, -ve takes the accent: itāque, and so; Mūsāque, and the Muse. But a particle does not throw the accent on the preceding syllable unless it is a true enclitic: itaque, therefore.

4. The final e of -ne and -ce may be dropped without disturbing the accent: istūc, vidēn (= vidēsne).

QUANTITY OF VOWELS

16. 1. The quantity of a vowel depends upon the time required to pronounce it, a long vowel requiring twice as much time as a short vowel. Thus ā = āā.

2. A vowel is short before another vowel or h, nd, and nt: dēus, god; nīhil, nothing; amāndus, to be loved; amānt, they love.

3. A vowel before consonant i is long, but is short in the compounds of iugum; māior, biugum.

4. A vowel is long before gm, gn, nf, ns, and before -so in inceptive verbs : frāgmentum, fragment ; benīgnus, kind ; Infra, below ; mēnsa, table ; quiēscō, to be quiet.

5. Common vowels are long or short.

QUANTITY OF SYLLABLES

17. 1. A syllable is long or short according to the time required to pronounce it.

2. A syllable is short if it contains a short vowel followed by a vowel or by a single consonant : familia, domina.

3. A syllable that ends in a short vowel followed by a mute with l or r is common, though it is regularly short in prose. In poetry it may be long or short : patrēs.

4. A syllable is long by nature when it contains a long vowel or a diphthong : mēnsae. Contractions are long : nī (= nihil).

5. A syllable is long by position when its short vowel precedes two consonants, or a double consonant : est, dux. But the union of a mute with a following liquid does not make position (see 3. above).

18. Monosyllables.—1. Monosyllables ending in a vowel are long : mē, tē, sē, sī.

EXCEPTIONS.—Enclitics are short (-quē, -nē, -tē, -vē, -cē, -psē, -ptē) ; also rē in compounds.

2. Monosyllables ending in a consonant are short : āt, sēd, pēr.

EXCEPTIONS.—bōs, cūr, dīc, dūc, ēn, fūr, hīc, hūc, lāc, lār, mōs, nōn, ōs, pār, pēs, plūs, quīn, sāl, sīc, sīn, sōl, vēr ; also verb-forms in s ; but ēs, thou art.

19. Final Syllables.—Final a and e are usually short; i, o, and u are usually long. The following are the chief exceptions:—

1. Final a is long
In the Ablative of the First Declension: viā.
In the Imperative of the First Conjugation: amā.
In indeclinable words: trīgintā.
2. Final e is long
In the Ablative of the Fifth Declension: diē.
In the Imperative of the Second Conjugation: tenē.
In adverbs from adjectives of the First and Second Declensions, except benē, malē, saepē.
3. Final i is short
In nisi, quasi, cui (when dissyllabic), and sometimes in mihi, tibi, sibi, ibi, ubi.
4. Final o is short
In egō, duō, modō (adv.).

20. A final syllable ending in any consonant save s is short.

Final as, es, os are long; is, us, ys are short. The following are the chief exceptions:—

1. Final es is short in the Nominative and Vocative singular of the Third Declension when the Genitive ends in ētis, itis, īdis: segēs, mīlēs, obsēs. But note abiēs, ariēs, pariēs, and compounds of pēs.

2. Final is is long in plural cases; in Nominatives that have the Genitive in itis, inis: as Samnis, Salamis; in the second person singular Present Indicative of the Fourth Conjugation; in velis, mālis, nōlis, and compounds of sīs.

3. Final os is short in compōs, impōs, ōs, and as the Nominative of the Second Declension.

4. Final us is long in the Nominative singular of the Third Declension, where the -u belongs to the stem, as palūs; in the Genitive singular, and in the plural of the Fourth Declension: as fructūs.

21. Increment of Nouns. — Any increase in the number of syllables found in the Nominative singular is called an Increment. In the increment of nouns, a and o are long; other vowels are short.

EXCEPTIONS. — 1. a is short in masculines in al and ar, and also in nouns in s preceded by a consonant: Caesāris; dāpis.

2. o is short in words in s preceded by a consonant, and in neuters of the Third Declension: inōpis, tempōris.

3. e is long after a vowel in the Fifth Declension: diēi.

4. i is long in words in ix: fēlicis.

5. u is long in nouns in ūs with Genitive in ūris, ūtis, ūdis; iūris, salūtis, incūdis.

22. Increment of Verbs. — 1. A verb increases when, in any form, it has more syllables than in the second singular Present Indicative Active. In verbal increments a, e, o are long, i, u are short; but e is short before the endings -ram, -rim, -ro: amāvērat.

2. e is short in the first increment of the Present Indicative Passive and Imperfect Subjunctive Active of the Third Conjugation; also in the Future ending -beris, -bere: volvēris, volvērem, amābēris, amābēre.

23. 1. Adjectives in -ilis have short penults, if derived from verbs; long, if from nouns: horribilis, puerilis.

2. Adjectives in -inus have long penults, unless they refer to time: vīcīnus, neighboring; but pristīnus, former.

3. Verbs with perfects in -uī and verbs in -iō of the Third Conjugation have a short stem-vowel: acuō, to sharpen; faciō, to make.

NOUNS

25. 1. Classes. — A proper noun is the proper name of an individual person or place: Cicerō, Cicero; Ītalia, Italy. A common noun is the common name of a class: homō, man; animal, animal.

2. A common noun may be concrete, denoting a person, place, or thing; or abstract, denoting a quality or property: puer, boy; oppidum, town; aqua, water; timor, fear.

3. A noun denoting a collection of objects is called a collective noun: exercitus, army.

GENDER

26. Gender is a classification of words corresponding originally to the natural distinctions of sex (natural gender), and later extended to inanimate objects (grammatical gender). Gender has to do only with words; sex refers to the living being. There are three genders, — Masculine, Feminine, and Neuter.

27. 1. Names of Living Beings. — Names of persons follow the natural gender: names of males are masculine; names of females are feminine: pater, father; māter, mother.

2. Nouns having the same form for the masculine and feminine are said to be of common gender: parēns, parent; civis, citizen; canis, dog; bōs, cow, ox.

3. Some nouns have different forms for the masculine and feminine: rēx, king, rēgīna, queen; dominus, master, domina, mistress; gallus, cock, gallīna, hen.

28. 1. Names of Things. — Names of winds, months, mountains (usually), and rivers are masculine.

NOTE.—These rivers are feminine: Allia, Lēthē, Matrona, and Styx.

2. The names of towns and countries in -us are feminine, while other towns and countries follow the grammatical gender indicated by their endings.

NOTE.—Pontus and Hellēspontus are masculine.

3. Indeclinable nouns, words and expressions used as nouns, are neuter: nihil, nothing; ūltimum valē, a last farewell.

NUMBER AND CASE

29. 1. There are two numbers: the Singular, denoting one; and the Plural, denoting more than one.

2. There are six Cases:—

Nominative (case of subject), answering the question, who? what? before a verb.

Genitive (case of complement), answering the question, whose? whereof?

Dative (case of indirect object, or of personal interest), answering the question, to or for whom?

Accusative (case of direct object), answering the question, whom? what? after a verb.

Vocative (case of address).

Ablative (case of adverbial relation), answering the question, by, through, with what? how? when? whence?

The Locative, denoting Place Where, is confined chiefly to names of towns and small islands. It has the form of the Genitive in singular nouns of the First and Second Declensions, and of the Ablative in other nouns: Rōmae, at Rome; Corinthī, at Corinth; Athēnīs, at Athens.

NOTE.—All but the Nominative and Vocative are called oblique cases.

THE STEM

30. The Stem, or fundamental part of a noun, is usually found by dropping the ending of the Genitive plural: mēnsārum, stem mēnsā; servōrum, stem servō; cīvium, stem cīvī.

THE DECLENSIONS

31. There are five Declensions, distinguished from each other by the final letter of the stem, and by the ending of the Genitive singular.

	Final Letter of Stem	Ending of Gen. Sing.
First Declension	ā	-ae
Second “	ō	-ī
Third “	ī or a consonant	-īs
Fourth “	ū	-ūs

CASES THAT ARE ALIKE

32. The Nominative and Vocative, except in nouns of the Second Declension with the Nominative in us.

The Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative neuter.

The Dative and Ablative plural.

The Nominative and Accusative plural in the Third, Fourth, and Fifth Declensions, generally.

FIRST DECLENSION

ā-Stems

33. Nouns of the First Declension, except nouns denoting male beings, are of the feminine gender, and the Nominative ends in ā.

Mēnsa, table; stem mēnsā-		Endings

Ab.	mēnsā, in, with, from, by a table	mēnsis, in, with, from, by tables	-ā -is

NOTES.—1. -ās is an old form of Genitive: pater familiās, father of a family. -āi is sometimes found in poetry.

2. The Dative and Ablative plural of fīlia, daughter, and dea, goddess, usually end in ābus, to distinguish them from the Dative and Ablative plural of fīlius, son, and deus, god.

3. The Genitive plural sometimes has -um for -ārum, chiefly in Greek words.

GREEK NOUNS

34. Proper names of Greek origin in -ās, -ēs, and -ē (feminine) are declined in the plural like mēnsa; in the singular, as follows:—

Aenēās, Aenēae, Aenēae, Aenēam (Aenēān), Aenēā, Aenēā.
Tydidēs, Tydidae, Tydidae, Tydidēn, Tydidē(-ā), Tydidā. epitomē, epitomēs, epitomae, epitomēn, epitomē, epitomē.

NOTE.—Many Greek proper names of the First Declension, with Nominative in -ēs, are in Latin put in the Third Declension.

SECOND DECLENSION

ō-Stems

35. Masculines end in -us, -er, -ir; neuters, in -um; -us and -um being modifications of -os and -om, respectively.

Ab.	virō	virīs

NOTES. — 1. Stems in vo- and quo- originally had os and om in the Nominative and Accusative. These forms are found especially in older Latin.

2. Words in -er and -ir have lost the case-ending in the Nominative and Vocative singular. In most of these words the e does not belong to the stem, and is lacking in the other cases: liber, book; G. librī.

3. Puer, boy; gener, son-in-law; adulter, adulterer; Liber, Bacchus; liberī, children; socer, father-in-law; vesper, evening; and compounds of -fer and -ger, as signifer, standard bearer, armiger, armor-bearer, have the e.

PECULIARITIES

36. 1. Proper names in -ius have the Genitive singular in -ī for -īi, and accent the penult whether it is long or short: Vergīi.

2. All nouns in -ius and -ium, until about 31 B.C., formed the Genitive singular in -ī, instead of -īi; as cōnsiliī from cōnsilium, and filī from filium.

3. Proper names in -ius, -āius, and -ēius, with filius, son, have -ī in the Vocative singular, accenting the penult; meus, my, has mī.

4. Deus, God, has no Vocative singular; in the Nominative and Vocative plural it has deī, diī, dī, and in the Dative and Ablative plural deīs, diīs, dīs.

5. Greek proper names in -eus have -eu in the Vocative: as Orpheus, V. Orpheu.

6. The following have -ūm for -ōrum in the Genitive plural:—

Words denoting value and measure: as nummūm, of coins; talentūm, of talents. A few other words: as duūm-virūm, of the duumvirs; deūm, of the gods; liberūm, of children; sociūm, of allies; fabrūm, of workmen. The regular form in -ōrum is also found in these words.

EXCEPTIONS IN GENDER

37. 1. Pelagus, sea; vīrus, poison; vulgus, crowd, are neuter.

2. Alvus, belly; carbasus, flax; colus, distaff; humus, ground; vannus, winnowing fan, are feminine.

GREEK NOUNS OF THE SECOND DECLENSION

38. Masculine and feminine end in -ōs, -ōs, -ūs, -ūs, and neuters in -on, -um.

N.	Dēlos (- us)	Panthūs	Rhododendron
G.	Dēlī	Panthī	Rhododendrī

V.	Dēle	Panthū	Rhododendron
Ab.	Dēlō	Panthō	Rhododendrō

THIRD DECLENSION

39. The stem ends in a consonant, or in -i, -u, or a diphthong.

Consonant stems are imparisyllabic; i-stems are parisyllabic, that is, have the same number of syllables in the Genitive as in the Nominative.

40. Divisions of Consonant Stems. — Consonant stems are divided into Mutes, Liquids, Nasals, and Fricatives (Spirants), according to the ending of the stem. In the oblique cases the stem appears without change.

MUTE STEMS

41. 1. Mute stems may end: —

In a labial (b or p): as trab-s, princep-s.

In a dental (d or t): as laus (laud-s), mīles (mīlet-s).

In a guttural (g or c): as rēx (rēg-s), iūdex (iūdec-s).

2. Masculines and feminines have s in the Nominative. Before s a p-mute is retained, a t-mute is dropped, and a k-mute unites with it to form x.

3. Most polysyllabic mute stems change their final vowel i into e in the nominative.

NASAL STEMS

45. These end in n, hiems, winter, being the only one in m.

Most masculines and feminines form the Nominative by dropping the stem-characteristic and changing a preceding vowel to o, while some masculines and most neuters retain the stem-characteristic and change a preceding i to e.

FRICATIVES (SPIRANTS)

s-Stems

46. The Nominative has no additional s, and changes e to i in masculines before s, and in neuters e or o to u. In the oblique cases the s of the stem usually becomes r between two vowels, and in a few words this r has crept into the Nominative (cf. 11. 8).

PECULIARITIES OF CASE-FORMS

49. 1. The following regularly have the Accusative singular in -im: amussis, rule; būris, plowbeam; sitis, thirst; tussis, cough; vis, force, and names of towns and rivers in -is.

2. These usually have -im in the Accusative singular: febris, fever; puppis, stern; pelvis, basin; restis, rope; secūris, ax; turris, tower.

3. These sometimes have -im in the Accusative singular: bipennis, battle ax; clāvis, key; cutis, skin; crātis, hurdle; messis, harvest; neptis, granddaughter; nāvis, ship; praesēpis, stall; sēmentis, sowing.

4. The following nouns have -ī in the Ablative singular:—

Those that have the Accusative in -im.

Neuter vowel stems with Nominatives in -e, -al, -ar.

Names of months in -is, and adjective vowel stems of the Third Declension.

Often amnis, river; avis, bird; civis, citizen; imber, rain; nāvis, ship; and Ignis in the phrases ferrō Ignique, with fire and sword; aquā et Ignī interdicere, to cut off from fire and water.

NOTE.—Names of towns, and adjectives used as proper names, have e; also iūvenis and aedilis.

5. Neuters in -e, -al, and -ar have -ia in the Nominative plural.

6. The following nouns have -ium in the Genitive plural:—

Neuters in -e, -al, -ar.

Parisyllables in -ēs, -er, -is, except ambāgēs, circumlocution; canis, dog; iūvenis, young man; senex, old man; pater, father; māter, mother; frāter, brother; accipiter, hawk.

GREEK NOUNS OF THE THIRD DECLENSION

52. 1. Nominative singular: —

$\omega\nu$, in names of men, usually becomes $-\delta$: Platō.

2. Accusative singular: —

āēr, aethēr, and names of places end in $-\tilde{\alpha}$: āera, aethera, Babylōna.

Parisyllables in $-\tilde{\alpha}$ end in $-\tilde{\alpha}m$: basim, pedestal.

3. Genitive singular: —

Parisyllabic proper names in $-\tilde{\alpha}s$ often have $-\tilde{\alpha}$ in the Genitive: Aristīdī, of Aristides.

Feminine proper names in $-\delta$ have the Genitive in $-\tilde{\alpha}s$ and the other cases like the Nominative, or they may be declined as Latin nouns: Dīdō, Dīdūs, Dīdō, Dīdō, Dīdō, Dīdō; or Dīdō, Dīdōnis, etc.

4. Vocative singular: —

Proper names in $-\tilde{\alpha}s$ (G. $-\tilde{\alpha}ntis$), $-\tilde{\alpha}s$, and $-\tilde{\alpha}s$ drop $-\tilde{\alpha}$: Atlā, Charybdī, Coty.

Proper names in $-\tilde{\alpha}s$ usually drop $-\tilde{\alpha}$: Orpheu. In prose such nouns usually follow the Second Declension, save in the Vocative.

5. Ablative singular: —

Parisyllables in $-\tilde{\alpha}s$ have $-\tilde{\alpha}$: basī.

6. Nominative plural, $-\tilde{\alpha}s$: Hērōēs.

7. Genitive plural: —

$-\tilde{\alpha}n$ ($\omega\nu$) is retained in the titles of books: Metamorphōseōn. $-\tilde{\alpha}m$ usually takes the place of $\omega\nu$, and $-\tilde{\alpha}m$ of $\epsilon\omega\nu$: Gigantum, Sardium.

8. Dative and Ablative plural: —

Words in $-\tilde{\alpha}s$ have $-\tilde{\alpha}s$ for $-\tilde{\alpha}bus$: poēmatīs, in poems.

9. Accusative plural: —

Folk-names have the Greek form $-\tilde{\alpha}s$, as well as $-\tilde{\alpha}s$: Cyclōpās and Cyclōpēs.

FOURTH DECLENSION (u-DECLENSION)

53. The Nominative ends in -us for masculines, and -ū for neuters.

CASE ENDINGS

	SINGULAR		PLURAL

Ac.	cornū	cornua
V.	cornū	cornua
Ab.	cornū	cornibus

NOTE.— The endings are those of the Third Declension, the -u of the stem usually absorbing the vowel of the ending. The -u is lost before -ibus in the Dative and Ablative plural.

PECULIARITIES

54. 1. These usually have -ubus in the Dative and Ablative plural: artūs (plur.), limbs; partus, birth; portus, harbor; tribus, tribe; verū, spit, and dissyllables in -cus.

2. Domus has also the following forms of the Second Declension:—

domī (Locative), at home
domō, from home

domōs (plur.), homewards

3. The following are feminine: acus, needle; domus, house; Idūs (plur.), Ides; manus, hand; porticus, porch; tribus, tribe.

4. In early Latin, nouns in -us often have the Genitive singular in -i: senāti, of the senate.

FIFTH DECLENSION

55. The stem ends in -ē; Nominative in -s.

Diēs, m., day ; stem diē-		Rēs, f., thing ; stem rē-		CASE ENDINGS

58. Heteroclitcs have forms of two declensions.

1. The following have singular forms of one declension, and plural forms of another:—

SING.

balneum, bath, 2d dēlicium, delight, 2d epulum, banquet, 2d iūgerum, acre, 2d vās, vessel, 3d

PLUR.

baeuae, 1st dēliciae, 1st epulae, feast, 1st iūgera, 3d
vāsa, 2d

2. Some nouns of the First Declension have also forms of the Fifth Declension in the Nominative and Accusative:—

lūxuria and lūxuriēs, luxury māteria and māteriēs, timber lūxuriam and lūxuriem māteriam and māteriem

3. Requiēs, rest, has no plural in use; in the singular, it is of the Third and Fifth Declensions: Nom., Voc. requiēs, Gen. requiētis, Dat. —, Acc. requiētem or requiem, Abl. requiēte or requiēs.

4. Plēbs (Gen. plēbis), commons, has also plēbēs, Gen. plēbei and plēbi in the expression tribūnus plēbi.

5. Vesper, evening, has Gen. vesperi or vesperis, Acc. vesperum, Abl. vesperō or vespere.

6. Famēs, hunger, of the Third Declension, has Abl. famē of the Fifth.

59. Heterogeneous nouns have different genders in the singular and the plural. The most common are:—

SING.	PLUR.
balneum, n., bath	balneae, f.
carbasus, f., flax	carbasa, n., sails
dēlicium, n.	dēliciae, f.

60. Indeclinable nouns are neuter, and are used only in the Nominative and Accusative singular.

fās, right	nefās, impiety īnstar, likeness	nihil, nothing
māne, morning	secus, sex

61. 1. Some nouns are found only in the Ablative singular: concessū, with the permission; iūssū, by the command; nātū, by birth.

2. These are used in two cases only: fors, chance, forte (Nominative and Ablative singular); spontis, free will, sponte (Genitive and Ablative singular).

3. Nēmō, no one, is regularly used only in the Nominative, Dative, and Accusative singular, nēmīnī, nēmīnem. The Genitive and Ablative singular, nūllus and nūllō, and the whole plural are borrowed from nūllus.

4. Opīs, dapīs, frūgīs (Gen.) have no Nominative singular.

5. Impetus, onset, of the Fourth Declension, and many monosyllables have no Genitive plural: as lūx, sōl, and ōs.

6. Vĕnum, sale, is usually found only in the Accusative, in such phrases as vĕnum dare, to sell.

7. Prĕci, prĕcem, prĕce, prayer, is not used in the Nominative and Genitive singular.

8. Viciis, vicem, vicc, turn, lacks the Nominative and Dative singular and the Genitive plural.

ADJECTIVES

62. Adjectives denote quality. They take the forms (a) of the First and Second Declensions; (b) of the Third Declension.

ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSION

63. 1. These form their feminine like nouns of the First Declension, and their masculine and neuter like nouns of the Second Declension.

2. ENDINGS OF FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSION

-us, -a, -um: as bonus, bona, bonum

-er, -ra, -rum: as pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum

-ur, -a, -um: as satur, satura, saturum

Bonus, good.

5. Asper, rough ; lacer, torn ; miser, wretched ; prōsper, prosperous ; tener, tender ; compounds of -fer and -ger, and sometimes dexter, right, are declined like liber. In other adjectives, the e does not belong to the stem: thus, niger, nigra, nigrum ; pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum.

6. The Genitive singular masculine and neuter of adjectives in -tus ends in -i, while the Vocative ends in -ie: Nom. agrārius ; Gen. agrāriī ; Voc. agrārie.

IRREGULAR ADJECTIVES

64. 1. There are nine irregular adjectives: ūllus, any ; nūllus, none ; ūnus, one ; sōlus, alone ; alius, another ; tōtus, whole ; alter, the other ; uter, which of two ? and neuter, neither.

All except sōlus lack the Vocative, and are regular in the plural.

2. Ūllus, nūllus, tōtus, sōlus, ūnus are declined alike:—

N.	nūllus	nūlla	nūllum
G.	nūllus	nūllus	nūllus
D.	nūllī	nūllī	nūllī
Ac.	nūllum	nūllam	nūllum
Ab.	nūllō	nūllā	nūllō

3. Uter and neuter are declined alike:—

N.	uter	utra	utrum
G.	utrius	utrius	utrius
D.	utri	utri	utri
Ac.	utrum	utram	utrum
Ab.	utrō	utrā	utrō

4. Alter, altera, alterum has -ius in the Genitive and -i in the Dative, but sometimes Dative feminine -ae.

5. Alius, alia, aliud, has -ius in the Genitive and -i in the Dative, but generally uses the Genitive of alter, instead of its own; or aliēnus may be used.

ADJECTIVES OF THE THIRD DECLENSION

65. These adjectives are declined like nouns of the Third Declension, and in the Nominative have three terminations, two terminations, or one termination.

1. THREE TERMINATIONS

		SING.		PLUR.
		Neut.		Masc. and Fem.	Neut.
N.	plūs			plūrēs	plūra
G.	plūris			plūrium	plūrium
D.	—			plūribus	plūribus
Ac.	plūs			plūrēs (-īs)	plūra
V.	—			—	—
Ab.	plūre			plūribus	plūribus

NOTE. — In the singular, plūs is a neuter substantive.

66. Adjectives of the Third Declension have -ī in the Ablative singular; -ia in the Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative plural, neuter; -is and -ēs in the Accusative plural, masculine and feminine, and -ium in the Genitive plural.

EXCEPTIONS. — 1. Comparatives have -e in the Ablative singular, -a in the Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative plural, neuter, and -um in the Genitive plural; plūrēs and complūrēs have -a (and -ia) and -ium.

2. Inops, needy, and memor, mindful, have -ī in the Ablative singular, but -um in the Genitive plural.

3. Participial adjectives in -āns and -ēns, when used as nouns or participles, have -e in the Ablative singular; otherwise, -ī. Thus, Caesare praesente, while Caesar was present; but in praesentī periculō, during the present danger.

4. Many adjectives of one termination have, in accordance with their meaning, no neuter endings: for example, pauper, poor; dives, rich.

5. Frūgī, frugal, and nēquam, worthless, are indeclinable.

6. The nouns ultor, ultrix, avenger, and victor, victrix, conqueror, are used as adjectives also, and in poetry have a neuter plural: victoria arma, Verg. Aen. III. 54, victorious arms.

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

67. There are three degrees of comparison, to denote different degrees of quality:—

1. The Positive, which simply attaches quality to an object without comparing it with any other object: as puer bonus, a good boy.

2. The Comparative, which implies comparison between two objects: as puer melior, the better boy.

3. The Superlative, which compares an object with at least two other objects: as puer optimus, the best boy.

COMPARATIVE AND SUPERLATIVE

68. To form the Comparative, -ior (neuter -ius) is added to the stem of the Positive. Vowel stems drop their characteristic vowel before adding the endings. Thus altus, high, on the stem alto- forms the Comparative altior (neuter altius).

69. The Superlative is formed by adding -issimus, -a, -um to the stem of the Positive. Vowel stems drop their characteristic vowel before adding these endings. Thus altus, high, has altissimus, -a, -um for the Superlative.

1. Adjectives in -er add -rimus to the Nom. sing. masc.: as pulcher, beautiful; Superlative pulcherrimus, most beautiful.

2. Vetus, old, has veterrimus, oldest, and mātūrus has mātūrissimus and mātūrrimus, most mature.

3. Six adjectives form their Superlative by adding -limus :—

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
facilis , easy	facilior	facillimus
difficilis , difficult	difficillior	difficillimus
similis , like	similior	simillimus dissimilis , unlike	dissimilior	dissimillimus
gracilis , slender	gracilior	gracillimus
humilis , low	humilior	humillimus

4. Adjectives in -dicus, -ficus, -volus have -entior in the Comparative and -entissimus in the Superlative: benevolus, benevolent, benevolentior, benevolentissimus.

NOTE. — Egēnus, needy, and prōvidus, provident, also have -entior and -entissimus, but these forms are really from the corresponding present participles of egēre, to be in need, and prōvidēre, to provide.

5. Nēquam has nēquior, nēquissimus; frūgī has frūgālior, frūgāliissimus; dīves has dīvitior and dītior, dīvitissimus and dītissimus.

6. These adjectives are compared with change of stem :—

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
bonus , good	melior	optimus
malus , bad	pēior	pessimus
māgnus , great	māior	māximus
parvus , small	minor	minimus
multus , much	plūs	plūrimus

ADJECTIVES WITHOUT TERMINATIONAL COMPARISON

70. 1. Most adjectives in -us preceded by a vowel, except adjectives in -quus : idōneus, favorable; pius, filial.

2. Many adjectives in -ālis, -ilis, -ilis, -bilis.

3. Many adjectives denoting material, duration, color, or indicating connection with some living thing: ferreus, iron; sempiternus, everlasting; flavus, yellow; equinus, of a horse.

Such adjectives are compared by prefixing magis, more, and māximē, most: as magis idōneus, māximē idōneus.

DEFECTIVE COMPARISON

71. 1. Positive lacking, but Comparative and Superlative suggested by a preposition:—

Preposition	Positive	Comparative	Superlative
citrā, on this side	—	citerior, nearer	citimus
dē, down	—	dēterior, worse	dēterrimus
extrā, outside	—	exterior, outer	{ extrēmus extimus
intrā, within	—	interior, inner	intimus
prae, before	—	prior, former	primus
post, after	—	posterior, later	{ postrēmus, last postumus, late-born
prope, near	—	propior, nearer	proximus
ūltrā, beyond	—	ūltior, farther	ūltimus

Also, from the archaic potis, possible, potior, preferable, potissimus.

2. Comparative lacking, or supplied from other adjectives:—

falsus, false	—	falsissimus
fidus, faithful	—	fidissimus
novus, new	recentior	{ novissimus, last recentissimus, newest
sacer, sacred	—	sacerrimus
vetus, old	vetustior	veterrimus

3. Superlative lacking, or supplied from other adjectives:—

iuvenis , young	iūnior	minimus nātū ingēns , immense	ingentior	—
longinquus , afar	longinquior	—

74. 1. ūnus has a plural: —

With nouns that have no singular: ūnae nūptiae, one marriage.

With nouns plural in form, but singular in sense: ūna vestimenta, one suit of clothes.

Meaning also, only, alone: Ubi, qui ūni lēgātōs miserant, ōrābant, Caes. B. G. IV. 16, The Ubi, who alone had sent ambassadors, begged.

2. mille is an indeclinable adjective in the singular; in the plural it is a noun, and declined as above.

3. Compounds of eight and nine are usually formed by subtraction: ūndētrīgintā, 29. From 20 to 100, the smaller number, followed by et, precedes; or the larger number precedes, and et is omitted: ūnus et vīginti, or vīginti ūnus, 21. Above 100, the larger number precedes: centum ūnus, or centum et ūnus, 101. Of three or more numerals, the larger always precedes the smaller: duo milia quadringenti septuāgintā, 2470.

PRONOUNS

75. A Pronoun is a word that stands in place of a noun. Often, however, a pronoun is used with a noun, and then is really an adjective.

76. Classes of Pronouns. — 1. Personal. 2. Possessive. 3. Reflexive. 4. Demonstrative. 5. Intensive. 6. Relative. 7. Interrogative. 8. Indefinite.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS

77. There is no Personal Pronoun of the third person, its place being supplied by the Demonstrative is.

First Person, ego, I.			Second Person, tū, thou, you.
	SING.	PLUR.	SING.	PLUR.
N.	ego	nōs	tū	vōs
G.	mei	nostrum (nostri)	tui	vestrum (vestri)
D.	mihi	nōbis	tibi	vōbis
Ac.	mē	nōs	tē	vōs
V.	—	—	tū	vōs
Ab.	mē	nōbis	tē	vōbis

1. Nostrum and vestrum are Partitive Genitives.
2. The suffix -met sometimes strengthens the Personal Pronouns: egomet, nōsmet.
3. Tū is sometimes strengthened by -te: tūte.
4. With the Ablative of the Personal Pronoun, the preposition cum is enclitic: mēcum, vōbiscum.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS (ADJECTIVES)

78. The Possessive Adjectives of the first and second persons are meus, -a, -um, my, mine; noster, -tra, -trum, our, ours; tuus, -a, -um, thy, thine; vester, -tra, -trum, your, yours. They are derived from the Personal Pronouns. The Possessive Adjective of the third person, derived from the Reflexive (79), is suus, -a, -um, his, her, its, their (own).

NOTES.—1. When reference is not made to the subject of the clause, use ēius for his, her, its, eōrum or eārum for their.

But the Possessives are commonly omitted, unless they are needed for emphasis or clearness.

2. Meus has Vocative sing. masc. mī.

3. The enclitic -pte is sometimes found with the Ablative of the Possessives, especially with suō, suā.

THE REFLEXIVE PRONOUN

79. The Reflexive refers to the subject. The Reflexive Pronouns of the first and second persons are supplied by the oblique cases of the Personal Pronouns: mihi, to myself; vōs, yourselves. The third person has a special reflexive form, alike for all genders, singular and plural.

G.	suī , of himself, herself, itself, themselves, etc.
D.	sibi
Ac.	sē (sēsē)
Ab.	sē (sēsē)

NOTE.—With the Ablative, cum is postpositive.

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS

80. The Demonstratives are used both as pronouns and adjectives. They point out an object as in some place, or as previously mentioned. They are: hic, this (at, or near the speaker); iste, that (at, or near the person addressed); ille, that (remote from the speaker); is, that (weaker and more general than ille); idem, the same. Is is also used to supply the place of the lacking personal pronoun of the third person.

1. An Ablative, quī, is found in quīcum. Quis is occasionally found for quibus.

2. Quīcumque (quaecumque, quodcumque), whoever, has a generalizing force: quodcumque hōc rēgnī, Verg. Aen. I. 78, All this realm.

3. quisquis, quicquid, and (adj.) quodquod, whoever, whatever, is rare, except in the masculine singular Nominative and Ablative, and the neuter Nominative, Accusative, and Ablative. Both parts of the compound are declined.

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS

83. Substantive quis? who? what? has no plural. The adjective form quī? what kind of? is declined like the Relative, both in the singular and the plural.

PRONOMINAL ADJECTIVES

86. 1. The following adjectives and their compounds frequently have a pronominal force: — ūnus, one; ūllus, any one; uter? which of the two? alter, the other of two; neuter, neither of the two; nūllus, no one.

2. alter uter is declined in two ways; either both parts, or only the second part: alter uter, altera utra, alterum utrum, etc.; or, alteruter, alterutra, alterutrum.

87. 1. Verbs have two voices, Active and Passive. The Active Voice denotes that the action proceeds from the subject: deus mundum regit, God rules the world. The Passive Voice denotes that the subject receives the action of the verb: mundus a deō regitur, the world is ruled by God.

2. Verbs are Transitive when their action passes over to an object: amō deum, I love God. They are Intransitive when their action is confined to the subject: puer currit, the boy runs.

Some verbs have both a transitive and an intransitive use.

CONJUGATION

88. Verbs are inflected in two forms, corresponding to the two voices, called the Active and the Passive.

1. Mood.—Verbs have three moods: Indicative, Subjunctive, and Imperative, and the following verbal forms: Infinitive, Gerund, Supine (verbal nouns); Participle, and Gerundive (verbal adjectives).

2. Tense.—The Indicative has six tenses: Present, Imperfect, Future, Perfect, Pluperfect, and Future Perfect. The Subjunctive has four: Present, Imperfect, Perfect, and Pluperfect. The Imperative has two: Present and Future.

3. Person and Number.—There are three persons: First, Second, and Third; and two numbers: Singular and Plural.

89. Deponent Verbs.—Verbs with Passive form and Active meaning are called Deponent: hortor, I encourage.

1. Verbs deponent only in the Perfect Participle and tenses from it are called Semi-Deponents, or Neuter Passives:—

audeō, audēre, ausus sum, to dare.

fidēō, fidere, fīsus sum, to trust.

gaudeō, gaudēre, gāvīsus sum, to rejoice.

soleō, solēre, solītus sum, to be accustomed.

2. The Perfect Passive Participles of adolēscō, to grow up; cēnō, to dine; pōtō, to drink; prandēō, to breakfast, have an active force; iūrātus, from iūrō, to swear, is active or passive.

VERB-STEMS

90. The Stems of a verb are those forms which are made from the root of the verb by adding a vowel or a combination of a vowel and a consonant.

1. Tenses formed on the Present Stem:—

Active and Passive	}	Present: Indicative, Subjunctive, Imperative, Infinitive, Participle, Gerund, Gerundive.
		Imperfect: Indicative, Subjunctive. Future: Indicative, Imperative.

2. Tenses formed on the Perfect Stem:—

Active	{	Perfect: Indicative, Subjunctive, Infinitive.
		Pluperfect: Indicative, Subjunctive.
		Future Perfect: Indicative.

3. Tenses formed on the Participial Stem:—

Perfect Passive: Indicative, Subjunctive, Infinitive, Participle.

Pluperfect Passive: Indicative, Subjunctive.

Future Perfect Passive: Indicative, Infinitive.

Future Infinitive: Active and Passive.

Future Active Participle, Supine.

THE FOUR CONJUGATIONS

92. 1. There are four Conjugations, which are distinguished by the vowel of the ending of the Present Infinitive. In the Active voice, the Present Infinitive ends:

In the First Conjugation in -āre (A-Conjugation).

In the Second Conjugation in -ēre (E-Conjugation).

In the Third Conjugation in -ĕre (Consonant Conjugation).
In the Fourth Conjugation in -ĭre (I-Conjugation).

NOTE. — Stems ending in u- belong to the Third Conjugation; as minuere.

2. The Present Indicative Active of the First Conjugation ends in -ō; of the Second in -ēs; of the Third in -ō (or -id); of the Fourth in -id.

3. Principal Parts. — The Present Indicative, Present Infinitive, Perfect Indicative, and Perfect Passive Participle (if the verb has one, otherwise the Supine or the Future Participle), are called the Principal Parts of a Verb, as they embrace the various stems on which the verb is built.

THE PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATIONS

98. 1. The First, or Active Periphrastic Conjugation, is formed by uniting the Future Active Participle with some tense of esse.

Pres. amātūrus sum, I am about to love; Subj. amātūrus sim; Impf. amātūrus eram, I was about to love; Subj. amātūrus essem; Fut. amātūrus erō; Pf. amātūrus fui.

NOTE. — The Future Active Participle with the Subjunctive of esse is often used for the missing Future of the Subjunctive.

2. The Second, or Passive Periphrastic Conjugation, is formed by uniting the Gerundive with some tense of esse.

Pres. amandus sum, I must be, ought to be, should be, loved; Subj. amandus sim; Impf. amandus eram; Subj. amandus essem; Fut. amandus erō; Pf. amandus fui.

VERBS IN -iō OF THE THIRD CONJUGATION

99. The following verbs of the Third Conjugation strengthen the stem in the Present by inserting an -i-: capīō, to take; cupīō, to desire; facīō, to make; fugīō, to flee; fodiō, to dig; gradior, to walk; iacīō, to throw; laciō, to lure (in its compounds); morior, to die; patior, to suffer; parīō, to bear; quatiō, to shake; rapiō, to seize; sapiō, to taste of; and speciō, to see (in its compounds).

This i is dropped before ē and i, except before -et, -ent, and -end. Thus, capiō, capis, capit, capimus, capitis, capunt; capiar; capiebam; capiens; capendus; but caperem; caperer.

PECULIAR FORMS

100. 1. Perfects in -āvī and -āvī may drop v between two vowels before s or r and contract; those in -ivī drop v before r or s, but contract only before s; thus amāvisti becomes amāsti; dēlēvissem, dēlēessem; amāveram, amāram; dēlēveram, dēlēeram; quaesivisse, quaesisse; but audīveram, audieram.

2. In petere, dēsinerē, and compounds of ire, in the Perfects, v is dropped in the first and third persons singular, and in the first person plural, but no contraction occurs: rediī, rediit, rediimus.

3. The third plural Perfect Indicative, uncontracted form, often ends in -ēre for -erunt: as amāvēre for amāvērunt.

4. The second singular Passive often has -re for -ris, but rarely in the Present Indicative, except in Deponents: abūtēre for abūtēris.

5. The Future Active Participle is usually formed on the Participial Stem. The following Future Participles are exceptions:—

Verb	Participial Stem	Future Participle
fruo , to enjoy	frūct-	fruitūrus
iuvō , to aid	iūt-	iuvātūrus (but adiūtūrus)
lavō , to bathe	laut- or lōt-	lavātūrus
morio , to die	mortu-	moritūrus
orior , to rise	ort-	oritūrus
pariō , to bear	part-	paritūrus
ruō , to rush	rut-	ruitūrus
secō , to cut	sect-	secātūrus
sonō , to sound	sonit-	sonātūrus

6. dīcere, dūcere, facere, and ferre have the Imperatives dīc, dūc, fac, fer. In prepositional compounds of faciō, and with re-, the a becomes i: as cōnficere, reficere. Here the Imperative ends in -fice: as cōnfice. Compounds of dīcere and dūcere accent the ultima: as ēdic, ēdūc.

ANCIENT AND POETICAL FORMS (OCCASIONALLY FOUND)

101. 1. The Present Subjunctive Active ends in -im instead of -am, -em: thus perduim for perdam; duim for dem.

2. In verbs of the Fourth Conjugation the e of the Imperfect Indicative is dropped: as lēnībam = lēniōbam.

3. The Perfect Subjunctive and Future Perfect Indicative Active in the First Conjugation have -assim and -assō for -āverim and -āverō (levassō = levāverō, imperassim = imperāverim); in the Second, -essim and -essō for -uerim and -uerō (habessim = habuerim, habessō = habuerō); in the Third, -sim and -sō for -erim and -erō (faxim = fācerim, faxō = fācerō).

4. In the Perfect of the Third Conjugation, -is is dropped after s and x: as dīxtī = dīxistī.

5. The Present Infinitive Passive adds -er: dīcier = dīcī.

6. The Gerundives of the Third and Fourth Conjugations have -undus for -endus: faciundus = faciendus, potiundus = potiendus.

FORMATION OF STEMS

Present Stem

102. 1. In the Vowel Conjugations the Present Stem is usually the same as the Verb-Stem: thus amā-, dēlī-, audī-.

2. But many verbs of the Vowel Conjugations have a consonant Verb-Stem:—

	Verb Stem	Present Stem
iuvāre	iuv-	iuvā(-)
vidēre	vid-	vidē(-)
venīre	ven-	venī(-)

103. In the Consonant (Third) Conjugation the Present Stem is rarely the same as the Verb-Stem; usually, to form the Present Stem, the Verb-Stem is strengthened:

1. By adding i: as cap-i-ō (Verb-Stem cap-).
2. By inserting m or n: as cum-b-ō, vin-c-ō (Verb-Stems cub-, vic-).
3. By adding n, t, sc: as cer-n-ō, flec-t-ō, nō-sc-ō (Verb-Stems cer-, flec-, nō-).
4. By Reduplication, repeating the initial consonant of the stem with i: gī-gn-ō (gī-gen-ō, Verb-Stem gen-); si-st-ō (Verb-Stem sta-).

Perfect Stem

104. The Perfect Stem is formed from the Verb-Stem:

1. By lengthening a short stem-vowel: emere, Pf. ēmī; legere, Pf. lēgī; ā becomes ē: agere, ēgī.
2. By adding s (usually only with a long stem-syllable): dīcere, Pf. dīxi. But stems in -nd and reduplicated Perfects (cecīdī) take -i.
3. By adding v in vowel-stems: amāre, Pf. amāvī; dēlāre, Pf. dēlēvī.

NOTE.—Those stems in a and e which lose their vowels, and a few others, change v to u: domāre, Pf. domuī; docēre, Pf. docuī.

4. By Reduplication; that is, placing the initial consonant and the following vowel (or e) before the Verb-Stem: poscere, Pf. poposci; cadere, Pf. cecidī.

NOTES. — 1. Spondēre, stāre, sistere reduplicate with both initial consonants, but lose the s of the Verb-Stem: spo-pondī, ste-tī, sti-tī.

2. As a rule, compounds do not reduplicate, except the compounds of dare, stāre, sistere, discere, poscere: thus circumdedī, ad-stiti, addidicī, dēposcī.

The compounds of currō vary: thus dēcucurrī or dēcurrī

Participial Stem

105. This stem is found in the Perfect Passive Participle, the Future Active Participle, and the Supine.

The Participial Stem is formed from the Verb-Stem: —

1. By adding -tu-: amā-tu-s, dēlē-tū-rus, audī-tu-m.

NOTE. — Stems in a and e that lose their vowel insert i: domāre, domitus; monēre, monitus. But docēre, doctus; secāre, sectus.

2. By adding -su-: pellere, pul-su-s.

EUPHONIC CHANGES IN FORMING THE PARTICIPIAL STEM

106. 1. Before s or t, b becomes p: scribere, scriptus.

2. Before t, the letters g, h, q, v become c; with s they form x: legō, lēctus; trahō, tractus; relinquō, relictus; vivō, victus; figō, fixus.

3. Before s, the letters d and t either disappear or are assimilated: claudere, clausus; mittere, missus.

4. Between m followed by s or t, a p-sound arises in the pronunciation, and this generally appears in writing: dēmō, dēmpsi, dēmpus.

5. When a stem ends in two consonants, the second is dropped before s or t: mulceō, mulsus; torqueō, tortus.

6. v preceded by a consonant becomes ū before -tus; if preceded by a, o, u, it becomes au, ō, ū: solūtus from solvō, fautus from faveō, mōtus from moveō, iūtus from iuvō.

LIST OF MOST IMPORTANT VERBS, WITH STEM-FORMS

First Conjugation (Infinitive -āre)

I. REDUPLICATED PERFECT

107. 1.
- dō, dare, dedī, datus, to give.*

The a of the stem is short except in dās, dā.

Compounds with monosyllabic prepositions and prefixes are of the Third Conjugation: abdō, abdere, circumdō, circumdare, circumdedī, circumdatus, to put around.

- 2.
- stō, stāre, stetī, status, to stand; Fut. Part. stātūrus.*

The compounds usually have no Past Participle.

Compounds with dissyllabic prepositions have -stetī in the Perfect; those with monosyllabic prepositions or re- have -stitī: thus circumstetī, cōnstitī.

Some have a Future Active Participle: īnstātūrus, praestātūrus.

II. PERFECT IN -ī WITH LENGTHENED STEM-VOWEL

108. 1.
- iuvō, iuvāre, iūvī, iūtus, to help; Fut. Part. iuvātūrus.*

- 2.
- lavō, lavāre, lāvī, lautus (lōtus), to wash; Sup. lavātum (lautum).*

III. PERFECT IN -vī AND -uī

109. 1.
- amō, amāre, amāvī, amātus, to love.*

- 2.
- crepō, crepāre, crepuī, crepitus, to rattle.*

- 3.
- cubō, cubāre, cubuī, cubitum, to lie down.*

Compounds that insert m in the present stem are of the Third Conjugation: as incumbō, 120. 5.

4. domō, domāre, domuī, domitus, to conquer.
5. (From necō) ēnecō, ēnecāre, (ēnecuī), ēnectus, to destroy.
6. fricō, fricāre, fricuī, frictus and fricātus, to rub.
7. micō, micāre, micuī, —, to glitter; also ēmicuī; but dīmicāvī.
8. pōtō, pōtāre, pōtāvī, pōtus, to drink. The Participle pōtus is used both actively and passively.
9. plicō (found only in compounds) has -āvī and -uī in the Perfect and -ātus and -itus in the Participle, as in implicō.
In Cicero, explicō and applicō always have -āvī, -ātus.
10. secō, secāre, secuī, sectus, to cut; Fut. Part. secātūrus.
11. sonō, sonāre, sonuī, sonitus, to sound; Fut. Part. sonātūrus.
12. tonō, tonāre, tonuī, —, to thunder.
13. vetō, vetāre, vetuī, vetitus, to forbid.

Second Conjugation (Infinitive -ēre)

I. REDUPLICATED PERFECT

110. (Infinitives are omitted in the list; all are in -ēre.)
 1. mordeō, momordī, morsus, to bite.
 2. pendeō, pependī, —, to hang (intrans.).
impendeō and dēpendeō lack the Perfect and Supine.
 3. spondeō, spopondī, spōnsus, to promise.
respondeō has Perfect respondī.
 4. tondeō, totondī, tōnsus, to shear.

II. PERFECT IN -ī WITH LENGTHENED STEM-VOWEL

111. 1. caveō, cāvī, cautus, to beware.
2. faveō, fāvī, fautūrus, to favor.

3. foveō, fōvī, fōtus, to cherish.
4. moveō, mōvī, mōtus, to move.
5. paveō, pāvī, —, to fear.
6. sedeō, sēdī, sessus, to sit.

Compounds with monosyllabic prepositions change e into i in present stem: adsideō, Pf. adsēdī. Dissideō, praesideō, and resideō have no Past Participle. For cōnsidō, see 121. 31.

7. videō, vīdī, vīsus, to see.
8. voveō, vōvī, vōtus, to vow.

STEM-VOWEL NOT LENGTHENED

IMPERSONAL VERBS

145. There are three classes of Impersonal Verbs; that is, verbs which have no definite person for a subject, and which are used only in the third person singular of a finite mood and in the Infinitive.

1. Those exclusively impersonal:—

decet, -uit, -ēre, it becomes.

dēdecet, -uit, -ēre, it is unbecoming.

libet, -uit (-itum est), -ēre, it is pleasing.

licet, -uit (-itum est), -ēre, it is permitted.

miseret, -uit, -ēre, it causes pity.

oportet, -uit, -ēre, it behooves.

paenitet, -uit, -ēre, it repents.

piget, -uit, -ēre, it displeases.

pudet, -uit (-itum est), -ēre, it shames.

rēfert, rētulit, rēferre, it is of importance.

taedet, —, -ēre, it wearies.

(pertaedet), -taesum est, -ēre, it disgusts.

2. Verbs implying operations of nature are usually impersonal:—

advesperāscit, -āvit, -ere, evening approaches.

fulget, fulsit, -ēre, it lightens.

grandinat, -āvit, -āre, it hails.

inlūcēscit, -lūxit, -ere, it grows light.

3. Verbs used impersonally in certain meanings:—

accēdit, it is added; accidit, it happens (unexpectedly); appāret, it is evident; attinet, it concerns; condūcit, it is profitable; cōnstat, it is agreed, it is certain; contingit, it happens (fortunately); convenit, it is agreed; dolet, it pains; ēvenit, it comes to pass; expedit, it is expedient; fit, the result is; fallit, fugit, praeterit, it escapes notice; interest, it is of importance; iuvat, it delights; liquet, it appears (in legal formulas); patet, it is manifest; placet, it is resolved; praestat, it is better; stat, it is determined; sufficit, it is enough.

NOTES.—1. The Imperative of Impersonal Verbs is supplied by the Present Subjunctive: thus, miserat tē pauperum, have pity on the poor.

2. Paenitet and puDET have the oblique cases of the Gerund: paenitendī causā. PuDET has a Gerundive.

3. Almost any verb may be used impersonally: pūgnātum est, a battle was fought.

ABUNDANT VERBS

146. Abundant Verbs have the same meaning expressed by different forms of conjugation: thus, lavāre and lavere. Again, these verbs may be Active and Deponent of the same conjugation: thus, adsentiō and adsentior.

INCEPTIVE OR INCHOATIVE VERBS (SEE 157. 2)

147. These have -scō or -scor in the Present. They denote the beginning of an action or state. All are of the Third Conjugation. They are formed from verb-stems or from nouns and adjectives.

1. Inceptives from Verbs

calēscō, caluī, to become hot.	Stem Verb, caleō.
coalēscō, coaluī, to unite.	alō.
condolēscō, condoluī, to ache.	doleō.
conticēscō, conticuī, to cease speaking.	taceō.
convalēscō, convaluī, to recover health.	valeō.
flōrēscō, flōruī, to bloom.	flōreō.
exārdēscō, exārsī, to take fire.	ārdeō.
horrēscō, horruī, to grow rough.	horreō.
liquēscō, —, to become liquid.	liqueō.

2. Inceptives from Nouns and Adjectives dītēscō, —, to grow rich, from dīs, rich. ēvānēscō, ēvānuī, to vanish, from vānus, empty. īgnēscō, —, to take fire, from īgnis, fire. mātūrēscō, mātūruī, to become ripe, from mātūrus, ripe. obdūrēscō, obdūruī, to grow hard, from dūrus, hard. obmūtēscō, obmūtuī, to become dumb, from mūtus, dumb.

PARTICLES

ADVERBS

148. Adverbs are usually oblique cases of Adjectives or Pronouns.

I. ADVERBS FORMED FROM ADJECTIVES AND NOUNS

BY SPECIAL ENDINGS

1. Adjectives and participles in -us and -er form the adverb in ē: —

Adj. doctus, learned miser, wretched

Adv. doctē, learnedly
miserē, wretchedly

NOTE.—bene, from bonus, and male, from malus, have ē.

2. The ending -iter is used with adjectives and participles of the Third Declension; but if the word ends in -ns or -rs, the adverb ends in -ter:—

Adj. ūtilis, useful ācer, sharp
 also audāx, bold

Adv. ūtiliter, usefully ācriter, sharply
prūdentē, wisely
audācter, boldly

NOTE.—Some adverbs from adjectives in -us have the ending -iter as well as -ē: firmus, firm, firmē and firmiter, firmly; largus, abundant, largē and largiter, abundantly. Alius forms aliter; violentus forms violenter.

3. -tim, -atim, -itim are added to nouns, and ī to participles in -us: thus, tribūtim, tribe by tribe; nōminātim, by name; virītim, man by man.

4. -itus is added to some adjectives and nouns: dīvinitus, divinely.

BY CASE-FORMS

149. 1. The Neuter Accusative forms in -um of adjectives of the First and Second Declension, and in -e of the Third, are used as adverbs: primum, first; cēterum, in other respects; facile, easily.

2. The Ablative form in ō from adjectives and participles of the Second Declension: crēbrō, frequently; serō, late; subitō, suddenly; but citō, quickly.

NOTE.—Sometimes they have both the endings ē and ō, but with different meanings: certō, certainly, certē, at least.

3. The Ablative form in -ā, -e, -is of adjectives and nouns: dextrā, on the right; forte, by chance; grātis, gratuitously.

BY COMPOSITION

150. 1. Of a Preposition with its case: antēā, formerly; imprimis, especially; dēnuō, anew.

2. Of other words: hodiē, to-day; māgnopere (māgnō opere), greatly; quotannis, yearly.

151. II. ADVERBS FROM PRONOUNS

Adverbs of Place

Interrogative	Relative	Demonstrative	Indefinite
ubi , where?	ubi , where	ibi , there (hic, istic, illic) ibidem , in the same place	alicubi , somewhere (usquam, usquam)
unde , whence?	unde , whence	inde , thence (hinc, istinc, illinc) indidem , from the same place	alicunde , from somewhere
quō , whither?	quō , whither	eō , thither (hūc, istūc, illūc) eōdem , to the same place	aliquō , to some place (usquam)
quā , on what side?	quā , where	eā , there (hāc, istāc, illāc) eādem , on the same side	aliquā , on some side

Adverbs of Time

quandō , when?	cum , when, as	tum , tunc , at that time	aliquandō , at some time umquam , ever quotiēns , how often?	quotiēns , (as often) as	totiēns , as often	aliquotiēns , some- times

Adverbs of Manner

quam , how much?	quam , (as much) as	tam , so much ut , utī , how?	ut , how, as	ita (sīc), thus quōmodo , in what way?	(sīcut , quōmodo , quemadmodum)	item , just so

COMPARISON OF THE ADVERB

152. 1. The only adverbs that can be compared are those formed by the endings -ē, -ō, -(i)ter from adjectives that are compared, and adverbs in e: as facile. The Comparative of the adverb ends in -ius, like the neuter Comparative of the adjective: as (doctē) doctius. The Superlative is formed from the Superlative of the adjective by adding -ē instead of the adjectival termination: as (doctissimus) doctissimē.

2. IRREGULAR COMPARISON

bene, melius, optimē, well.

diū, diūtius, diūtissimē, for a long time.

māgnopere, magis, māximē (also māximopere, māximō opere), greatly.

male, pēius, pessimē, badly.

multum, plūs, plūrimum, much.

nōn multum or parum, minus, minimē, little.

prope, propius, proximē, near.

saepe, saepius, saepissimē, frequently.

3. Without a Positive are:—

dēterius, dēterrimē, worse.

ōcius, ōcissimē, more swiftly.

potius, potissimum, preferably.

prius, primum and prīmō, sooner.

4. Without a Comparative are:—

meritō, meritissimō, deservedly; and nūper, nūperrimē, recently.

5. Without a Superlative are:—

satis, satius, enough; and secus, sētius, otherwise.

PREPOSITIONS

153. 1. Prepositions were originally adverbs which, later on, took a case with them: contrā, opposite; contrā hostem, against the enemy. They define more closely the local ideas of the cases. The Accusative and the Ablative are the only cases that are used with prepositions. (For lists, see 258.)

2. The so-called Inseparable Prepositions are obsolete adverbs, found only in composition:—

amb-, am-, around: ambiō, I go around; amplector, I embrace.

dis-, dī-, apart: discerpō, I tear apart; dīlabor, I fall down.

por-, forth: porrigere, to reach out.

re- (before a vowel or h, red-), back: remittere, to send back; redeō, I return. Reddō, I give back, has red- even before a consonant.

sē- (before a vowel sēd-), apart from: sēiungere, to separate; sēditiō, a going aside.

vē-, without: vēcors, without reason; vēsānus, insane.

CONJUNCTIONS

154. Conjunctions are Co-ordinate, connecting similar constructions; or Subordinate, joining dependent constructions to those on which they depend. (See 464–470.)

INTERJECTIONS

155. 1. Of Pain: hei, heu, ō, vae. (See 200. Note 2.)

2. Of Surprise: ecce, ēn, hem, ō. (See 200. Note 3.)

3. Of Question, Address: eho, heus, ō, prō. (See 200. Note 1.)

NOTE.—The following forms are used as Interjections:—

hercle (hercule), by Hercules! meherculēs, mehercle, by Hercules! medius fidius (= medius fidius iuuet), so help me the god of truth! mēcastor, by Castor! pol! edepol! Pollux! by Pollux!

FORMATION OF WORDS

156. By the formation of words we mean the way in which new words are made from words already extant, either by Derivation or by Composition. In Derivation, we distinguish stem-words (Primitive) and derived words (Derivatives). In Composition, we have Simple words and Compound words.

That part of a word which forms the basis for several kindred words is called the Root:—

reg- is root for regō, rēx, rēgnum.

DERIVATION

DERIVATION OF VERBS

I. FROM OTHER VERBS

157. 1. Frequentatives (Intensives) denote an often-repeated or strengthened action. They are formed from the Perfect Participle by a change of -us to -āre:—

From trahō (Part. tractus) is formed the Frequentative tractāre, to drag violently.

From currō (Part. cursus) is formed the Frequentative cursāre, to run to and fro.

The Participle in -ātus changes into -itāre: clāmitāre, to bawl, from clāmātus.

2. Inceptives (Inchoatives) denote a beginning. (See 147.)

3. Desideratives denote a desire. They are formed on Participial stems, end in -uriō, and are of the Fourth Conjugation: —

From edō, I eat (Part. ēsus), is formed the Desiderative ēsuriō, I am hungry.

4. Diminutives denote a diminution or a weakening of the action. They end in -illō and are of the First Conjugation: — cantillō, I hum a tune, from cantō.

scribillō, I scribble, from scribō.

II. FROM NOUNS AND ADJECTIVES

158. 1. Those of the First Conjugation are usually transitive; those of the Second are intransitive: — armāre, to arm (from arma, weapons).

lūcēre, to grow light (from lūx, light).

2. Those of the Third and Fourth are partly transitive, partly intransitive: — metuere, to fear (from metus, fear).

finire, to end (from finis, end).

sitire, to be thirsty (from sitis, thirst).

DERIVATION OF NOUNS

I. FROM OTHER NOUNS

159. 1. Diminutives denote that which is small of its kind. They are also used to denote affection or contempt. They end in -ulus, -ula, -ulum (after a vowel, in -olus, -ola, -olum); -culus, -cula, -culum; -ellus, -ella, -ellum; -illus, -illa, -illum. They retain the gender of the stem-word.

Stem-word	Diminutive	Meaning
puer , boy	puerulus	little boy filia , daughter	filiola	little daughter
homō , man	homunculus	manikin
lapis , stone	lapillus	pebble
sacrum , temple	sacellum	chapel

2. The place where things are stored, or where animals are kept, is indicated by the following endings: —

-ārium: as aerārium, treasury

-ētum: as quercētum, oak-grove

-ile: as ovile, sheep-fold

3. The following endings are generally in nouns that modify the names of persons: —

-ina, to indicate a professional act, or the place in which it is exercised: medicīna, surgery; tōnstrīna, barber's shop.

-ium, to indicate a condition, or a union of persons: conlōgium, union; servitium, slavery.

4. Patronymics denote descent, though sometimes they denote the followers of, the partisans of: as Aeneadēs, the partisans of Aeneas.

Masculine Patronymics end in

-idēs (-ιδης): Priamidēs, son of Priam

-idēs (-ειδης): Atridēs, son of Atreus

-iadēs: Anchisiadēs, son of Anchises

-adēs: Aeneadēs, son of Aeneas

Feminine Patronymics end in

-is: Tantalīs, daughter of Tantalus

-ēis: Nērēis, daughter of Nereus

-ias: Thestias, daughter of Thestius

5. The suffix -ātus indicates official position: cōnsulātus, consulship (cōnsul).

II. FROM ADJECTIVES

160. Nouns derived from Adjectives end in -ia, -itia, -tās (-itās), -tūdō (-itūdō), and occasionally in -mōnia. They are abstract, denoting Quality:—

insānia, madness; malitia, malice; bonitās, goodness; fortitūdō, firmness; sāctimōnia, holiness.

III. FROM VERBS

161. 1. Nouns in -ōs (-or), -us, -ium, -ēla, formed on verbal stems, denote an Act or a State:—

furor, madness; decus, grace; gaudium, joy; querēla, complaint.

2. Nouns in -or, formed on Participial stems, indicate:—

Regular, or constant, or professional employment in an act: scriptor, scribe; pīctor, painter.

A single act so notable that it gives one a historical designation: Rōmulus conditor, Romulus, the founder.

3. Nouns in -crum, -trum indicate Place or Means:—

lavācrum, bath; sepulcrum, burial-place; arātrum, plough.

4. Nouns in -iō, -us (Gen. -ūs), formed on Participial stems, usually denote a quality, or an act considered alone: institūtiō, education; mōtus, motion.

Sometimes they are concrete, and denote the Result of an action: accūsātiō, a suit.

NOTE.—The endings -idō, -ium, -sūra, -tūra, have the same meaning: libīdō, desire, cultūra, cultivation; cēnsūra, ensorship.

5. Nouns in -men, -mentum, -bulum, -culum, -ulum, denote Means, Instrument, or Place of an action:—

volūmen, a roll; alimentum, nourishment; vēnābulum, hunting-spear; gubernāculum, rudder; vīnculum, chain.

DERIVATION OF ADJECTIVES

I. FROM VERBS

162. 1. The endings -bundus and -cundus give the adjective a little stronger force than the Present Participle has: mirābundus, full of wonder; verēcundus, modest.

2. The ending -idus denotes a State or Characteristic: pavidus, timid.

3. The endings -ilis and -ibilis denote Capability or Desert in the Passive: docilis, teachable; facilis, easy to be done; mōbilis, easily moved.

4. The endings -āx and -ulus denote Tendency, usually toward evil: fallāx, deceitful; mendāx, lying; garrulus, loquacious.

II. FROM COMMON NOUNS

163. 1. The ending -eus means made of: ferreus, iron; aureus, golden.

2. -ālis, -āris, -ārius, -ēnsis, -ius, -icus, -icius, -ivus, -nus mean pertaining to, connected with: nāvālis, naval; populāris, democratic; legiōnārius, legionary; forēnsis, public; rēgius, kingly; bellicus, military; tribūnfcus, pertaining to a tribune; tempestivus, stormy; paternus, paternal.

3. -ōsus and -lentus indicate fulness: Insidiōsus, dangerous; vinolentus, drunken.

4. -ātus, -itus, -ūtus mean furnished with: ālātus, winged; auritus, furnished with ears; nāsūtus, having a large nose.

5. -ānus and -inus indicate pertaining to a place, or origin from: urbānus, pertaining to the city; dīvīnus, of divine origin.

6. -ter (-tris), pertaining to; equestris, equestrian.

III. FROM PROPER NAMES

164. 1. Adjectives are usually formed from the names of persons by the endings -ānus, -īnus, -iānus: Sullānus, pertaining to Sulla; Verrīnus, pertaining to Verres; Tullīānus, pertaining to Tullius.

2. Roman family names in -ius retain this form as an adjective to show the work done by a member of the family: via Appia, the Appian road.

3. The endings -ēus and -icus are usually found only with Greek proper names: Epicūrēus, Epicurean; Sōcraticus, Socratic.

4. Adjectives used as nouns are formed from the names of places by the endings -ānus, -īnus, -ēnsis, -ās (Gen. -ātis): Rōmānus, Roman; Caudīnus, of Caudium; Cannēnsis, of Cannae; Arpīnās, of Arpinum.

NOTE. — In Greek words the endings are -ius and -aeus: — Salamīnius, of Salamis; Lārissaeus, of Larissa.

5. Adjectives are formed from names of nations or tribes by adding -icus, sometimes -ius: Gallicus, Gallic (from Gallus); Thrācius, Thracian (from Thrāx).

6. Most names of countries are derived from adjectives, but even then adjectives are sometimes formed from them, to point out something in a foreign land: Hispāniēnsis exercitus, the (Roman) army in Spain.

IV. FROM OTHER ADJECTIVES

165. These are Diminutives, and end in -ulus, -olus, -ellus, -culus; -olus occurs after e and i, otherwise -ulus; -culus occurs after e, i, u, and consonant stems: albulus, whitish; parvulus, little; aureolus, golden; misellus (= miser-lus), wretched; pauperculus, poor.

V. FROM ADVERBS

166. 1. Adjectives of Time end in -tinus (-tīnus), -ernus (-urnus): prīstinus, ancient; repentīnus, sudden; hodiernus, of to-day; nocturnus, nocturnal.

2. Adjectives of Place end in -cus (-quus): posticus, in the rear.

COMPOSITION

167. The first part of a compound word is the modifier which gives to the base of the word a more precise meaning. The base can be a verb, a noun, or an adjective.

COMPOSITION OF VERBS

168. The base is always a verb; the modifier may be

1. The stem of a verb; found, however, only in compounds of faciō: adsuēfaciō, to accustom; calefaciō, to make warm; patefaciō, to open.

2. The stem of a noun: animadvertō, to notice; testificor, to call to witness.

3. A particle: —

An adverb: benefaciō, to treat well.

A preposition: referō, to bring back.

NOTES. — 1. ǣ and ě are usually changed into i; ae into i: — cōnficiō (from faciō); redimō (from emō); conquiro (from quaerō).

Before two consonants ǣ passes into ě: cōnfectus (from factus).

2. ǣ remains only in the compounds of caveō, maneō, trahō, and some of those of agō, but becomes ě in the compounds of arceō, carpō, fallō, farcio, gradior, pariō, patior, scandō, spargō.

ě remains in the compounds of edō, ferō, gerō, metō, petō, serō, tegō, terō, vehō, and some of those of legō (perlegō, neglegō, intellegō; but conligō, dēligō).

ae is retained only in compounds of haereō and in pertaesum est.

COMPOSITION OF NOUNS

169. Nouns may be compounded:—

1. Of a noun-stem and a verb-stem; this is joined to the base by I: agricola (agr-i-cola), farmer; arm-i-ger, armor-bearer.

2. Of two nouns, or a noun and an adjective: manū-missiō, the freeing of a slave; bi-duum, a period of two days.

3. Of a preposition and a noun: dē-missiō, a letting down.

COMPOSITION OF ADJECTIVES

170. Adjectives may be compounded:—

1. Of two nouns, or a noun and an adjective. The connecting vowel is I, if the base begins with a consonant: miser-i-cors, pitiful.

2. Of a preposition and a noun, ā, dē, ex, in, sē having a negative force: con-cors, harmonious; dē-mēns, distracted.

3. Of a preposition and an adjective, in having a negative force, while per and prae intensify, and sub weakens: in-dignus, unworthy; per-modestus, very modest; sub-mōrōsus, somewhat peevish.

SYNTAX (SENTENCE-BUILDING)

AGREEMENT

SUBJECT AND PREDICATE

171. Subject. — The Subject may be a noun, a pronoun, an adjective or participle, an indeclinable word, an infinitive, or a clause: cōsul imperat, the consul orders; ille maeret, he mourns; bonī amantur, the loyal are loved; amantēs amantur, the loving are loved; “a” anceps est, “a” is doubtful; errāre hūmānum est, to err is human; opportunū accidit quod advēnistī, it was fortunate that you came. The Subject is in the Nominative.

NOTE. — Unless emphatic, or for the sake of contrast, the subject, if a personal pronoun, is omitted: vōs manētis, ego abeō, you remain, I go away.

172. Indeterminate Subject. — The Indeterminate Subject, where reference is not to any particular person, is expressed:

1. By the passive of transitive verbs: laudor, I am praised; i.e. some one praises me.

2. By the 3d sing. pass. of intransitives: itur, some one goes.

3. By the 3d plur. act.: dīcunt, they say; i.e. it is generally reported.

4. By the 1st plur. act., when the speaker includes himself: quae nōn habēmus cupimus, people (the speaker included) long for what they do not possess.

5. By the second person singular Subjunctive active (see 321. 3): dīcās, you may say = some one may say.

6. By an indefinite pronoun, generally in introducing an objection: fōrsitan quispiam dixerit, possibly some one might say.

173. 1. Predicate. — The Predicate is usually a verb, but may be a noun, pronoun, or adjective with the copula esse, to be: puer scribit, the boy is writing; arbor est viridis, the tree is green; homō est Thrāx, the man is a Thracian.

2. Esse, to live, exist, is an independent verb: est deus, God exists.

It is also used with an adverb to denote a State or Condition: tūtō esse, to be safe.

3. Other copulas besides esse are: ferī, to become; existere, to appear; manēre, to stay; vidēri, to seem; and the passive of such verbs as take a double Accusative in the active.

4. In compound tenses, parts of the verb sum are often omitted, especially est, sunt, esse.

THE SUBJECT AND THE PREDICATE NOMINATIVE

174. 1. The verb agrees with its subject in number and person: vōs valētis, you are well; anni praetereunt, the years pass by.

2. If the predicate nominative is an adjective, a participle, or a pronoun, it agrees with the subject in gender, number, and case: nēmō fit cāsū sapiēns, no one becomes wise by accident; tū beātus vidēris, you seem happy; puer laudātus est, the boy was praised; virtūs laudanda est, virtue is to be praised.

3. If the predicate is a noun or adjective, it agrees with the subject:

In case always: Athēnae omnium artium domicilium fuerunt, Athens was the home of all arts.

In gender usually: Athēnae omnium doctrinārum inventricēs fuerunt, Athens was the discoverer of all sciences; leō est rēx animālium, the lion is the king of animals.

In number, if it indicates a person: Fabius populī Rōmānī scūtum vocābātur, Fabius was called the shield of the Roman people.

4. If the subject and predicate nominative differ in number and gender, the copula usually agrees with the nearest noun. This is regularly the case, if an Infinitive is the subject: contentum suis rēbus esse māximae sunt dīvitiae, to be content with one's lot is the greatest riches.

5. When cum with its case is joined to a singular subject, the predicate is sometimes in the plural: māter cum filiā capiuntur, the mother with her daughter are captured.

6. The predicate sometimes gets its number and gender from the idea suggested, and not from the grammatical form of the subject. This is the case with collective nouns and with milia with a personal signification: cum tanta multitudō lapidēs conicerent, in mūrō cōsistendī potestās erat nullī, Caes. B. G. II. 6, since so great a multitude were hurling stones, no one could stand on the wall.

SEVERAL SUBJECTS

175. 1. Number.—With two or more singular subjects, connected by and, the predicate is in the plural, especially if the subjects are persons: Isocratēs et Gorgiās ad summam senectūtem vixērunt, Isocrates and Gorgias lived to extreme old age.

2. The predicate is in the singular, if it refers to each subject, or if the subjects form a sum total: religiō et fidēs antepōnātur amīcitiāe, let religion and faith be preferred to friendship; senātus populusque Rōmānus intellegit bellō opus esse, the senate and Roman people know that there is need of war.

3. When the predicate precedes, it agrees with the nearest subject: vīsae sunt facēs ārdorque caeli, torches and the flame of the sky were seen.

4. If several singular subjects are united by nec . . . nec, aut . . . aut, the predicate is in the singular rather than the plural. But the plural is used with personal subjects: in hominibus iuvandis aut mōrēs spectārī aut fortūna solet, in aiding men either custom or fortune is usually looked to.

176. Person.—If the subjects are of different persons, the predicate is of the first person rather than the second, and of the second rather than the third: ego, tū, et Balbus manūs sustulimus, you, and Balbus, and I lifted up our hands.

NOTE.—Observe that the order in Latin is the order in persons: first, second, third.

177. 1. Gender.—If the predicate is an adjective or participle, it agrees with the subjects in gender: pater et filius mortuī sunt, the father and his son are dead.

2. If the subject consists of two or more abstract feminine nouns, the predicate is sometimes neuter: temeritās et incōstantia fugienda sunt, rashness and fickleness should be avoided.

3. If the subjects are of different genders, the predicate is in the masculine if they are names of persons, in the neuter if they are names of things: iam pridem māter et filius mortuī sunt, the mother and the son have been dead for a long time; dīvitiae et honōrēs incerta sunt, riches and honors are uncertain.

4. If some of the subjects are names of persons and some of things, the predicate gets its gender from the persons: rēx rēgiaque classis unā profectī sunt, the king and the royal fleet set out together.

NOTE. — The predicate can get its gender from the nearest noun.

AGREEMENT OF ADJECTIVES

178. An attributive adjective agrees with the noun it limits in gender, number, and case: sapiēns cōsul, a wise consul.

2. An attributive adjective belonging to two or more words generally agrees with the nearest: patrius mōs et disciplina, ancestral custom and rule.

The predicate adjective has been treated under 171 and 173.

APPOSITION

179. By Apposition one substantive is placed by the side of another that denotes the same person or thing: Alexander rēx, Alexander the king.

The noun in apposition usually defines more particularly the noun with which it is in apposition.

The word in apposition agrees with the principal word in case, and, as far as possible, in gender and number: urbs Rōma, the city of Rome; urbs Athēnae, the city of Athens; Rhēnus flūmen, the river Rhine.

180. 1. Partitive Apposition. — In Partitive Appositive the whole is subdivided into its parts: duo rēgēs, ille bellō, hic pāce, civitātem auxērunt, two kings advanced the state, the former by war, the latter by peace.

2. An Accusative may be in apposition with a clause: admoneor ut aliquid etiam de sepultura dicendum existimem, rem non difficilem, I am reminded to consider that something should be said on the subject of burial also, a matter not difficult.

181. 1. Predicate Attribution and Apposition. — Any case may have another word in the same case in Predicative Attribution or Apposition: Socratem sapientissimum virum Atheniensis interfecerunt, the Athenians slew Socrates, a man of the greatest wisdom.

2. This predicate attribute is found in expressions of Office, Worth, Age: Cato senex historiam scribere instituit, Cato, when an old man, began to write history.

3. It indicates mental or physical condition, or has a local or temporal force: invitus hoc feci, I did this unwillingly; milites exanimati pervenerunt, the soldiers came up out of breath; Socrates primus hoc docuit, Socrates was the first who taught this.

NOTES. — 1. This construction is most common with the adjectives primus first; princeps, chief; prior, former; posterior, following; postrumus, last; unus, one; solus, alone; volens, nollens, etc.

2. The predicate sometimes agrees with the appositive: Volsinii, oppidum Tuscorum, concrematum est fulmine, Volsinii, a town of the Tuscans, was consumed by a lightning-flash.

AGREEMENT OF PRONOUNS

182. 1. Relative and Demonstrative Pronouns agree in gender and number with the words on which they depend, or to which they refer, but they get their case from the construction of the sentence: arboris serit agricola, quarum fructus aspiciet numquam, the farmer plants trees, of which he will never see the yield; diligentia in omnibus rebus plu- rimum valet; haec colenda est nōbīs, diligence is worth much in everything; it should be cultivated by us.

2. A Relative or a Demonstrative referring to a clause is in the neuter. Instead of quod we generally have id quod: Pompēius, quod (id quod) mihi summō dolōrī est, ipse sē adflixit, Pompey has ruined himself, a thing which is the greatest grief to me.

3. Referring to two or more words, the laws already given hold good. But if the antecedent is a collective noun, the relative is usually in the plural: Caesar omnem equitātum praemittit, quī . . . videant, Caesar sends forward all the cavalry, to see.

4. The Relative and the Demonstrative often agree with a predicate noun, instead of with the antecedent: Thēbae, quod Boeōtiae caput est, Thebes, which is the capital of Boeotia.

NOTE. — This does not occur when the predicate noun is a proper name: est genus quoddam hominum quod Hīlōtae vocātur, there is a certain class of men which is called Helots; nor in questions, when the question depends on the idea suggested by a word: quid est cārītās? what is charity?

5. The person of the verb of a relative clause depends on the person of the antecedent: ego nōn is sum quī mortis periculō terrear, I am not one to be frightened by the fear of death.

THE CASES

THE ACCUSATIVE

163. The Accusative has three uses:—

It is the case of the Direct Object of an action;

It defines the Compass of an action or quality;

It shows the End or Limit towards which motion is directed.

ACCUSATIVE OF THE DIRECT OBJECT

184. The Direct Object of a transitive verb may represent:—

1. A person or thing, already existing, which is affected by the action: boni civēs patriam amant, loyal citizens love their country.

2. A Result not previously existing, but produced by the action: Rōmulus et Remus urbem condidērunt, Romulus and Remus founded a city.

NOTES.—1. In changing to the passive construction, the Object Accusative becomes the Subject Nominative: urbs ā Rōmulō et Remō condita est, the city was founded by Romulus and Remus.

2. A transitive verb is used absolutely when it is used without an object: fāma est Helenum Grāiās rēgnāre per urbēs, there is a rumor that Helenus is reigning throughout Grecian cities.

ACCUSATIVE OF THE PERSON OR THING AFFECTED

185. Type: amō patriam, I love my country.

1. Intransitive verbs which become transitive when compounded with circum, per, praeter, and trāns take the Accusative: circumvenire Gallōs, to surround the Gauls; partēs quās modo percucurrī, Cic. Or. III. 52, the portions that I have just run over; iam hōs cursū, iam praeterit illōs, Verg. Aen. IV. 157, now in his course outstrips these, now those; trānsire montēs, to cross the mountains.

2. Many verbs compounded with ad, in, super, and some with ante, con, inter, ob, and sub, take the Accusative: adit vātem, he approaches the priest; coīre societātem, to form a union; inīre cōsulātum, to enter on a consulship; obīre lēgātiōnem, to undertake an embassy; subīre labōrēs, to undergo toils.

NOTE.—This is common with verbs of Surpassing and Excelling, such as superāre, anteīre, antecēdere; but many of these verbs are used both with the Accusative and with the Dative. With other verbs the preposition is repeated, or the Dative is used: invādere in hostēs, to attack the enemy.

186. The following Impersonals take the Accusative: — decet, it is proper; dēdecet, it is unseemly; fallit, it deceives; fugit, it escapes my notice; praeterit, it escapes; ōrātōrem irāscī minimē decet, it ill becomes an orator to get angry; simulāre dēdecet, to pretend to be is improper.

NOTE. — Decet and dēdecet may also have an Infinitive, a neuter pronoun, or an adjective as subject.

187. Verbs of the Affections or Emotions. — These verbs, regularly intransitive, are sometimes used absolutely and sometimes transitively, according to their meaning: doleō (lūgeō, maereō, fleō, gemō, lāmentor) cāsum Cicerōnis, I grieve (mourn, weep) over Cicero's mishap; queror, conqueror cāsum Cicerōnis (or dē cāsū Cicerōnis), I grieve over Cicero's mishap; horreō, reformidō bellum, I shudder at war; rīdeō incōnstantiam hominum, I laugh at the fickleness of men; mīror, admīror mē ipsum, I wonder at myself.

188. The Accusative as the Object of the Passive. — In poetry, many verbs that have a middle force — that is, whose subject performs an action on itself or on something connected with itself — take an Accusative of the object: induitur cultum faciemque Diānae, she assumes the garb and form of Diana.

ACCUSATIVE OF THE RESULT PRODUCED

189. Type: Aenēas urbem condidit, Aeneas founded a city.

Neuter pronouns and neuter adjectives may be used with any verb as the Accusative of the Result Produced: nōn possum idem glōriārī, I cannot make the same boast; loquentem vāna, talking empty things.

190. 1. Cognate Accusative. — Any verb may take an Accusative of the Result Produced, if it has a form or a meaning similar to that of the verb. This Accusative regularly has a modifier: longam viam ire, to travel a long journey.

2. Verbs of Tasting and Smelling take an object of the Result Produced: vīnum redolēns, smelling of wine; olet unguenta, he smells of perfumes.

TWO ACCUSATIVES

191. Object and Predicate. — Two Accusatives, the one of the Object, the other of the Predicate Noun are found:

1. With verbs of Naming, as appellāre, nōmināre, vocāre, dīcere: senātus appellat Divitiacum amīcum, the senate calls Divitiacus friend.

2. With verbs of Making, Appointing, Choosing; as facere, reddere, creāre, dēligere, dēsīgnāre: Pompēius mare tūtum reddidit, Pompey made the sea safe; populus Rōmānus rēgem Numam creāvit, the Roman people made Numa king.

NOTE.—The only Predicate Accusative with reddere is an adjective.

3. With verbs of Considering; as dūcere, exīstimāre, indicāre, numerāre, putāre: Catōnem sapientem putant, they consider Cato wise.

4. With verbs of Holding, Giving, Taking; as habēre, dare, addere, adsūmere: addunt Aeduōs amīcōs, they add the Aeduans as friends.

5. With verbs meaning to show oneself in a certain light: praestā tē virum, show yourself a man.

NOTE.—Sē praestāre is used only in a good sense.

6. With verbs meaning to Understand, to Distinguish, to Inscribe, chiefly in the passive: cōgnōscēs mē tuī cōn-siliī fautōrem, you shall find me a promoter of your plan.

192. Person and Thing. — Two Accusatives, one of the Person and the other of the Thing, are found with: —

1. Verbs of Teaching and Hiding; as docēre, to teach; cēlāre, to conceal from: Catō ipse filium litterās docuit, Cato himself taught his son his letters; imperātor iter exercitum cēlāvit, the general concealed his route from the army.

NOTE. — Docēre may also take dē with the Ablative: docent eum dē adventū hostium, they inform him of the arrival of the enemy.

Cēlāre, in the passive, always takes dē with the Ablative: māximīs dē rēbus cēlātus est, he has been kept ignorant of the most important things.

2. Verbs of Asking, Begging, Demanding; as poscō, flāgitō, ōrō, rogō: Caesar frumentum cottidīē Aeduōs flāgitābat, Caesar each day kept demanding corn of the Aeduans.

NOTE. — Postulāre, petere, precārī, regularly take ab with the Ablative of the Person: postulō hōc ā tē, I demand this of you.

193. Retained Accusative. — In changing to the Passive construction, the Accusative of the Person becomes the subject, while the Accusative of the Thing is retained:

Active: Cicerōnem sententiam rogāvērunt, they asked Cicero his opinion.

Passive: Cicerō sententiam rogātus est, Cicero was asked his opinion.

194. Two Accusatives with Compounds. — Compounds with trāns may have, besides the Accusative of the Object, an Accusative depending on trāns: Caesar Germānōs flūmen trācit, Caesar puts the Germans across the river.

ACCUSATIVES THAT DEFINE THE COMPASS OF AN ACTION OR QUALITY

195. Adverbial Accusative. — This Accusative is found only in neuter adjectives and pronouns used as substan-tives, and the form is usually felt more as an adverb than a substantive; multum, plūs, tantum, quantum are the common words: multum tē diligō, I love you much.

NOTE.—Some other phrases and expressions fall under this head: māximam partem, for the most part; id temporis, at that time; meam vicem, for my part, etc.

ACCUSATIVE OF EXTENT

196. Extent of Space is expressed by the simple Accusative: Caesar duās fossās xv pedēs lātās perdūxit, Caesar made two ditches fifteen feet wide.

NOTE.—If the idea of space is not suggested by the governing word, per with the Accusative is used: per omnēs partēs prōvinciae, through all parts of the province.

197. Extent in Time is expressed by the Accusative, or, where emphatic, by the Accusative with per: diēs circiter quīndecim iter fēcērunt, Caes. B. G. I. 15, they made a journey of about fifteen days; per decem diēs, Cic. in Cat. III. 20. 26, through ten days.

ACCUSATIVE OF SPECIFICATION (GREEK ACCUSATIVE)

198. The extent of the action of any verb may be expressed by the Accusative neuter of a pronoun: nōs aliquid tē iūvimus, I have helped you somewhat.

NOTE.—Cētera, in other respects, nihil, in no respect, have the same use: cētera Grāius fuit, Verg. Aen. III. 594, he was in other respects a Greek.

In poetry, the Accusative of any word may be used as above: omnia Mercuriō similis, Verg. Aen. IV. 558, like unto Mercury in all respects.

Many so-called Accusatives of Specification are really only cases of retained Accusatives (cf. 193).

ACCUSATIVE OF THE LIMIT OF MOTION

199. The Accusative denotes the End or Limit towards which motion is directed. This is used: —

1. With names of Towns, Cities, and Small Islands: Caesar Rōmam rediit, Caesar returned to Rome.

2. With domum (meaning home), domōs, rūs: puer domum revertitur, the boy returns home (but in domum, into the house); rūs iit, he went to the country.

NOTES. — 1. Ad with the Accusative of a town denotes towards the vicinity of.

2. Urbs, oppidum, colōnia, mūnicipium, without an attribute, are used with a preposition before the name of the city: in oppidum Cirtam, into the town of Cirta.

With an attribute they follow the name of the city: Cirtam in oppidum Africae, into Cirta, a town of Africa.

3. In poetry, the Limit of Motion may be expressed by the Accusative of any noun without a preposition, though this is not a common construction: Lāvīniaque vēnit litōra, Verg. Aen. I. 2-3, and came to the Lavinian shores.

4. The motion must be expressed with each item in Latin: to Caesar in the camp, ad Caesarem in castra (not castris).

5. Petō is transitive and does not allow a preposition.

ACCUSATIVE IN EXCLAMATIONS

200. The Accusative of a noun or of a personal pronoun, usually with a modifier, is found in exclamations of wonder or of pain, with or without the interjections ō and heu: mē miserum! wretched me! ō fortunātam rem publicam! O fortunate republic!

NOTES. — 1. For emphasis in address, ō is used with the Vocative.

2. Vae takes the Dative: vae victis! woe to the conquered!

3. Ēn and ecce take the Nominative also: ēn Priamus! lo Priam! ecce homō! behold the man!

For the Accusative with Prepositions, see 258.

THE DATIVE

DATIVE OF THE OBJECT

201. The Dative is used as the Indirect or Remote Object of a verb, usually of a transitive verb. It generally answers the question "To whom?" Transitive verbs take also a direct object in the Accusative: pater filiō pecūniam dat, the father gives his son money.

202. Dative with Compound Verbs. (See 185. 2.)—Both transitive and intransitive verbs compounded with the prepositions ad, ante, cum (con), in, inter, ob, post, prae, sub, super take an indirect object in the Dative:—

1. Transitive

addere alicui animum, to lend one courage.

adferre alicui dolōrem, to cause one grief.

antepōnere honōrem divitiis, to prefer honor to riches.

praeferre rem rei, to prefer one thing to another.

praeficere aliquem exercituī, to place one over the army.

2. Intransitive

intercēdere lēgī, to oppose a law.

obvenire alicui, to meet some one.

interesse cōsiliis, to take part in plans.

praeesse rei pūblicaē, to take charge of the state.

3. Among the common exceptions are: adiuvō, adorior, adgredior, conlocō, comparō, impellō, incendō, incūsō, in- veniō, interficiō, obsideō, obtineō, opprimō, oppūgnō. These take the Accusative (see 185. 2).

NOTE.—Compounds with con, instead of taking the Dative, usually repeat cum and take the Ablative: commūnicāre aliquid cum aliquō, to share something with some one.

203. Double Construction.—Aspergere, to sprinkle, circumdare, to surround, and dōnāre, to give, have a double construction, as follows:—

aspergit āram sanguine , he sprinkles the altar with blood.	aspergit ārae sanguinem , he sprinkles blood on the altar.
circumdat urbī mūrum , he places a wall around the city.	circumdat urbem mūrō , he encircles the city with a wall.
dōnat filiō dīvitiās , he bestows riches on his son.	dōnat filiū dīvitiās , he endows his son with riches.

204. Verbs that have different constructions with different meanings:—

metuere and timēre alicui (mihi) (libertātī) dē rē publicā	} to fear for.	metuere and timēre aliquem (aliquid) aliquid ab aliquō	} to fear.
cōnsūlere	{	rēi publicae , to provide for the state. aliquem , to consult some one. in aliquem graviter , to take harsh measures against some one.
prōspicere and prōvidēre	{	rēi publicae , to provide for the state. aliquid , to provide something.
cavēre	{	alicui , to provide safety for some one. aliquid , to shun something.

205. Dative with Intransitive Verbs. — The Dative of the Person or the Thing is used as the indirect object of many intransitive verbs, some of the most common of which mean to help, hinder, hurt, agree to, differ with, pity, pardon, forgive, oppose, lie in wait for, envy, be angry with, rail at, threaten, command, obey, yield to, oppose, heal, spare, restrain oneself, please, displeasē, persuade, trust, distrust: civitatī persuāsīt, Caes. B. G. I. 2, he persuaded the state; Allobrogibus imperāvit, Caes. B. G. I. 28, he ordered the Allobroges; philosophia medētur animīs, philosophy heals the mind; probus invidet nēminī, a good man envies no one.

Exceptions: aequāre, decēre, dēficere, iuvāre, iubēre, vetāre, take the Accusative.

NOTE. — In the passive these verbs are used impersonally: invidētur mihi, I am envied.

DATIVE OF PURPOSE, END, OR SERVICE

206. This Dative has a predicative use, is in the singular number, and is semi-abstract in its nature. It occurs most usually with some form of esse, and is generally accompanied by a second Dative of the person for whom something is, or is done: pollicitusque est sibi eam rem cūrae futūram, Caes. B. G. I. 33, and promised that that matter would be a care to him; quem auxiliō Caesarī Aedui miserant, Caes. B. G. I. 18, which the Aeduians had sent for an aid to Caesar.

DATIVE OF THE AGENT

207. The Dative denotes Agency. This is the regular construction with the Gerund or Gerundive: Caesarī omnia ūnō tempore erant agenda, Caes. B. G. II. 20, Caesar had to do everything at one time.

NOTES. — 1. The Ablative with ā sometimes takes the place of this Dative, but only to avoid ambiguity: mīlitibus ab imperātōre cōnsulendum est, the interests of the soldiers must be consulted by the general.

2. In poetry, and rarely in prose, a Dative of the Agent is often found with the compound tenses of the passive voice: mihi hōc prōvīsum est, this has been foreseen by me.

DATIVE OF REFERENCE

208. The Dative of Reference points out the person in whose eyes the statement is true, or to whom the statement refers, or who feels an interest in the statement, or whose attention is called to it: versātur mihi ante oculōs aspectus Cethēgī, Cic. Cat. IV. 11. 16, there is ever before my eyes the sight of Cethegus.

NOTE. — This Dative does not modify a single word, but the sentence.

209. The Ethical Dative is found only with the personal pronoun, and the connection of the Dative with the rest of the sentence is very slight: Tongilium mihi ēdūxit, Cic. Cat. II. 4. 23, he has led out my Tongilius.

(Compare this with our English colloquialism, "There's a fine horse for you.")

210. Dative of the Point of View.

Local: Volscōs, quae gēns ad Campāniam euntibus nōn longē ab urbe est, Volsci, a community which is not far from the city to those going (= as one goes) toward Campania.

Mental: vērē aestimantī, L. 37. 58. 8, to one judging truly.

NOTE. — The Participle is the form commonly found with this Dative.

211. Dative of Separation.— Where the idea of Personal Interest is implied, the Dative occasionally takes the place of an Ablative: scūtō ab novissimīs unī militī dētractō, Caes. B. G. II. 25, having snatched a shield from a soldier on the rear. This may be considered as Indirect Object also.

DATIVE OF POSSESSION

212. Esse with the Dative conveys the idea of Possession: cum hīs nāvibus nostrae classī eiusmodī congressus erat, Caes. B. G. III. 13, with these ships our fleet had such an encounter.

NOTES.—1. If the possession of qualities is affirmed, the Ablative of Quality, inesse with the Dative, or in with the Ablative, is used: Cicerō māximā eloquentiā est; Cicerōnī māxima eloquentia inest; māxima in Cicerōne eloquentia est, Cicero possesses very great eloquence.

2. With nōmen the proper name is usually made to agree with the Dative rather than with nōmen: mihi Cicerōnī nōmen est, my name is Cicero.

DATIVE OF PLACE

213. The Place Towards Which Motion is Directed is sometimes expressed in poetry by the Dative: lābentur flūmina pontō, rivers will glide on to the sea.

DATIVE WITH ADJECTIVES

214. The Dative is used with adjectives meaning near, equal, like, unlike, friendly, hostile, and, in general, with adjectives having a meaning similar to that of the verbs in 205. These adjectives are usually united with some tense of esse: hōc bellum nōn minus vīctōribus quam vīctīs exitiōsum fuit, this war was no less destructive to the victors than to the vanquished; quī proximī Rēmīs erant, Caes.

B. G. II. 12, who were next to the Remi; māximē plēbī acceptus fuit, Caes. B. G. I. 3, he was very pleasing to the people (= very popular).

NOTES. — 1. For propius and proximus with the Accusative, see 258. 2.

2. Amīcus, inimīcus, and familiāris, in the Positive and Superlative, are used as substantives modified by a possessive pronoun or a Genitive: meus amīcissimus, my dearest friend; Cicerōnis familiāres, Cicero's intimates. So pār, proprius, similis.

3. Instead of adjectives denoting Friendliness, followed by the Dative, ergā with the Accusative may be used: vestra ergā mē voluntās, Cic. Cat. IV. 1. 5, your kindly feeling towards me. Instead of adjectives denoting Unfriendliness, followed by the Dative, adversus, ad, or in with the Accusative may be used: adversus ea respondēbō, to that I will reply. Also ad haec respondēbō, and hīs respondēbō, to this I will reply.

4. Ūtilis, useful, inūtilis, useless, aptus, fit, idōneus, suitable, necessārius, necessary, and parātus, ready, may take the Dative, or the Accusative with ad: locus castrīs (ad castra) idōneus, a place suitable for a camp.

THE GENITIVE

215. The Genitive is the case of the Complement, and is akin to the adjective. It is used chiefly as the complement of nouns and adjectives, less often as the complement of verbs.

I. THE GENITIVE WITH NOUNS

216. Subjective and Objective Genitive. — 1. When the noun which the Genitive limits contains the idea of an action, the Genitive may be Subjective; that is, Active; or Objective; that is, Passive. If the Genitive denotes the subject of the action, it is called the Subjective Genitive; if it denotes the object of the action, it is called the Objective Genitive.

Subjective: Ariovistus ad postulata Caesaris pauca respondit, Caes. B. G. I. 44, Ariovistus replied briefly to Caesar's demands (the demands made by Caesar).

Objective: Cupiditas gloriae, desire of glory.

(In this sentence gloriae denotes the object of the desire).

Pro veteribus Helvetiorum iniuriis populi Romani, Caes. B. G. I. 30, in return for the ancient wrongs inflicted by the Helvetians on the Roman people (lit. in return for the ancient injuries of the Helvetians of the Roman people).

As in the above sentence, the Subjective Genitive precedes the Objective.

2. Instead of the Objective Genitive of persons, in, erga, adversus with the Accusative of the person are generally used, particularly when the other noun is accompanied by a possessive pronoun or by a Subjective Genitive: amorem in patrem tuum, Cic. Sull. 12. 16, love for your father.

3. Instead of the Subjective Genitive of personal pronouns, the possessive pronoun is used, agreeing in case with the modified noun: non est ista mea culpa, sed temporum, Cic. Cat. II. 3. 5, it is not my fault, but that of the times.

4. Possessive Pronouns are sometimes used for Objective Genitives: ullam rei publicae partem cum sua minima invidia auderet attingere? Cic. Sest. 49. 11. (Who) . . . would have dared to take any part in politics at the risk of the very least unpopularity to himself?

5. Nostrī and vestrī are objective forms; nostrum and vestrum, partitive forms.

217. Genitive of Possession. — 1. The Genitive denotes possession: in castris Helvetiorum, Caes. B. G. I. 29, in the camp of the Helvetians.

2. The Genitive is used with esse, fieri, putari, etc., to indicate one to whom something belongs or of whom something is a characteristic. These Genitives are often used as predicates: Gallia est Ariovistī, Gaul belongs to Ariovistus; adulēscētis est māiōrēs nātū reverēri, it is the duty of a young man to respect his elders; ūnum genus est eōrum, Cic. Cat. II. 18. 12, one class consists of those.

NOTES. — 1. Instead of the Genitive of the personal pronoun, the corresponding possessive pronoun is used: haec erant mea, these things were mine.

2. Instead of the neuter of the predicate adjective, we regularly use the Genitive of the masculine of the Third Declension adjective of one ending: sapientis est, it is wise; it is characteristic of a wise man.

218. 1. The Genitive occurs with the Ablatives causā and grātiā, which are used as prepositions and follow their nouns. The Ablative of the possessive pronoun with causā takes the place of the Genitive of the personal pronouns: laudis causā (grātiā), for the sake of praise; meā causā, for my sake; rei frūmentāriae commeātūsque causā, Caes. B. G. I. 39, for the sake of provisions and supplies.

2. The indeclinable īnstar is also used with a Genitive: (aedificant) īnstar montis equum, Verg. Aen. II. 15, they build a horse as large as a mountain.

219. Appositive Genitive. — The Appositive Genitive or Genitive of Definition has almost the force of an appositive: vitium tarditātis, the fault of slowness.

220. Genitive of Origin. — The Genitive denotes Origin: filia Cicerōnis, the daughter of Cicero.

221. The Genitive of Material. — The Genitive denotes that of which a thing consists: acervus farris, a heap of spelt.

222. Genitive of Quality. — Quality is expressed by the Genitive. This Genitive is found in the singular and has an attribute, usually māgnus, māximus, summus, tantus: vir māgnae sapientiae, a man of great wisdom; habēmus enim hūiuscemodī senātūs cōsultum, Cic. Cat. I. 4. 12, for we have the senate's decree of this very nature.

223. Genitive of Measure. — The Genitive indicates Number, Measure, Time, Space: trīduī via, Caes. B. G. I. 38, a journey of three days.

224. Genitive of Price or Value. — General or Indefinite Price or Value is expressed by the Genitive, used with aestimāre, facere, putāre, etc. The most common of these Genitives are māgnī, plūris, plūrimī, māximī, parvī, minōris, minimī, quantī, tantī, tantīdem, permāgnī, nihīlī: quantī emistī? at what price did you buy? parvī existimō, little do I care.

NOTE. — All forms of the Genitive of Quality are common in the predicate: vir erat priscae sevēritātis, he was a man of old-fashioned sternness.

For the Ablative of Quality, see 245.

225. Partitive Genitive. — The Genitive indicates the whole of which a part is made prominent. This Genitive is modified: —

1. By nouns of quantity and measure; as pars, part; numerus, number; cōpia, abundance; multitūdō, multitude; modius, measure; pondus, weight: multitūdō hominum, a multitude of men; . . . quae pars civitātis Helvētiaē, Caes. B. G. I. 12, which part of the Helvetian state.

2. By words used as neuter substantives, if they are in the Nominative, or in the Accusative without a preposition; as tantum, quantum, aliquantum, multum, plūs, plūri-mum, paulum, minus, minimum, satis, parum, nihil, hōc, id, illud, istud, idem, quid, etc.: virtūs nihil expetit praemiī, virtue demands no reward; satis ēloquentiae, enough eloquence; . . . minus dubitātiōnis, Caes. B. G. I. 14, less of doubt.

3. By Comparatives and Superlatives; also the Superlatives of adverbs: māior frātrum, the elder of the brothers; mākīmē omnium laudandus, most greatly to be praised among all.

4. By ordinals, and by pronouns like uter, alter, neuter, uterque, ūllus, nāllus, nēmō, quisquam, quis, quicumque, quisquis, quisque, nōnnūllī, multī, paucī, quotus quisque: . . . cum sciās esse hōrum nēminem, Cic. Cat. I. 15. 23, since you know that there is no one of these.

5. By adverbs of place and degree: ubinam gentium sumus? Cic. Cat. I. 9. 9, where in the world are we? eō adrogantiae, to that pitch of presumption.

NOTES.—1. Adjectives of the Second Declension are found in the Partitive Genitive, but those of the third are attracted into the case of the modifying word: aliquid novī, something new; but aliquid ūtile, something useful.

2. Instead of the Partitive Genitive the Ablative with ex or dē may be used to indicate Selection. This is regularly so with quīdam, and often with ūnus and other cardinals: ūnum ē multīs, one of many; quīdam ex militibus, some of the soldiers; videō dē istīs, quī sē populārēs habēri volunt, abesse nōn nēminem, Cic. Cat. IV. 10. 13, I see that of those who wish to be considered democratic some are absent.

3. Where both words cover the same ground, and where there is no contrast between the whole and the part, the attributive is found: multī hostēs, many of the enemy.

4. When modified by uterque the pronoun is put in the Genitive; the substantive, in the same case as uterque: uterque hōrum, each of these; uterque cōsul, each consul.

II. GENITIVE WITH ADJECTIVES

226. 1. The Objective Genitive is used with adjectives that denote Desire, Experience, Fulness, Knowledge, Memory, Participation, Power, and their contraries; as avidus, cupidus, studiōsus; cōnsciūs, gnārus, perītus; Insciūs, Ignārus, imperītus; adfinis, particeps, compos, plēnus; expers, inops; memor, immemor: . . . dīxissetque sē semper bonōrum ferrāmentōrum studiōsum fuisse, Cic. Cat. III. 10. 10, and had said that he had always been very fond of good cutlery.

2. The Objective Genitive is used with some Present Participles of transitive verbs, if they denote a permanent quality: homō fugiēns labōris, a man shirking labor (regularly); but homō fugiēns labōrem, referring to a particular case.

3. Instead of the Dative, the Genitive is often used

With superstes, surviving.

With proprius, own; commūnis, common; sacer, sacred.

With similis and dissimilis, always the Genitives meī, tuī, suī, nostrī, vestrī.

III. GENITIVE WITH VERBS

227. 1. Verbs of Remembering, Reminding, and Forgetting take the Genitive, particularly meminisse, to bear in mind; reminisci, to remember; oblivisci, to forget: mortuōrum meminī, I keep in mind the dead; praeteritōrum meminī, I keep in mind the past; . . . obliti salutis meae, Cic. Cat. IV. 1. 6, forgetting my safety.

2. Meminī, I recall, takes the Accusative: Caesarem meminī, I recall Caesar.

3. Recordārī, to call to mind, takes dē with the Ablative of the person, and usually has the Accusative of the thing: recordor aliquid dē Catōne, I call to mind something of Cato.

4. Admoneō, commoneō, commonefaciō, I remind, I impress on, take the Accusative of the person, while the thing is expressed by the Ablative with dē, or, less commonly, by the Genitive: nōs tantī virī rēs admonuit, the matter reminded us of so great a man; dē quō vōs admonuī, I reminded you of this.

5. The Genitive is used with the phrase mihi in mentem venire: vēnit mihi Platōnis in mentem, I thought of Plato.

6. With verbs of Remembering, Reminding, Forgetting, the neuter of a pronoun or an adjective is in the Accusative: multa memini, I remember many things; tē haec admonēbō, I will admonish you of this.

228. Verbs of Judicial Action. — Verbs of Accusing, Acquitting, Condemning, and Convicting take the Genitive of the Crime and the Ablative of the Penalty. The most common of these verbs are accūsāre, arguere, arcessere, convincere, damnāre, absolvere, and reum facere: Miltiadēs, capitis absolūtus, pecūniā multātus est, Miltiades, though acquitted of a capital offense, was fined (lit. mulcted in money).

NOTE. — Note particularly the phrases

postulāre dē repetundīs, to proceed against for extortion.

accūsāre and damnāre dē venēficiis, to accuse of (to condemn for) poisoning.

accūsāre and damnāre inter sicāriōs, to accuse of (to convict of) murder.

accūsāre dē vī, to accuse of assault.

vōtī damnātus, having attained one's prayer.

229. Verbs of Emotion. — The Impersonals miseret, it moves to pity, paenitet, it repents, piget, it wearies, pudet, it shames, taedet, it tires, and the personal verb misereor, I pity, take the Genitive of the person towards whom or the thing towards which the feeling is directed and the Accusative of the person who feels: mē pudet stultitiae, I am ashamed of my folly; hōc mē pudet, I am ashamed of this; mē tamen meōrum factōrum atque cōnsiliōrum numquam, patrēs cōscriptī, paenitēbit, Cic. Cat. IV. 20. 8, and yet, Conscript Fathers, never shall it repent me of my deeds and plans; miserēre nostrī, pity us.

NOTES.—1. Pudet also takes the Genitive of the person before whom one feels ashamed: pudet mē deōrum hominumque, I am ashamed before gods and men.

2. A demonstrative or a relative pronoun may be used as the subject: nōn tē haec pudent? Do not these things shame you?

230. 1. Interest and rēfert.—Interest takes a Genitive of the person concerned; seldom of the thing: Caesaris interest, it is of importance to Caesar.

2. The Ablative singular feminine of the possessive pronoun is used instead of the Genitive of the personal pronoun: nunc, patrēs cōscriptī, ego meā videō quid intersit, Cic. Cat. IV. 9. 1, now, Conscript Fathers, I see what is to my interest.

3. The Measure of Concern or Interest is expressed by an adverb, an adverbial Accusative, or a Genitive of Price: Caesaris interest māximē (plūrimum) (māximī), it concerns Caesar very greatly.

4. The Object of Concern is expressed by a neuter pronoun as a subject, by an Infinitive (or Accusative and Infinitive), by ut or nē with the subjunctive, by an indirect question: hōc meā interest, this concerns me; interest omnium rēctē facere, it is of importance to all to do right; interest bonōrum nē improbī cōnsulem faciant, it is of inter- est to the loyal that the disloyal do not make a consul; meā interest quid dē mē amīcī loquantur, it is of importance to me what my friends say about me.

NOTE. — Apposition is expressed by a relative clause.

5. Rēfert does not take the Genitive of the person, but in other respects has the same construction as interest.

GENITIVE WITH VERBS THAT USUALLY TAKE THE ABLATIVE

231. Potior governs the Genitive in the phrase potiri rērum, to control matters.

Implēre, complēre, egēre occasionally take the Genitive, while with indigēre it is the more common construction: cum complētus iam mercātōrum carcer esset, Cic. II. Verr. 5. 147, when the prison had already been filled with merchants.

THE ABLATIVE

232. The Ablative has three fundamental uses, denoting —

1. The Place From Which (Ablative of Source or Origin, Ablative of Material, Ablative of Separation, Ablative of Specification, Ablative of Comparison).
2. The Place Where (Ablative of Place, Ablative of Time).
3. The Thing With Which (Ablative of Accompaniment, Ablative of Manner, Ablative of Quality, Ablative of Means, Ablative of Measure, Ablative with Verbs of Plenty and Want, Ablative of Price, Ablative with opus, Ablative with Verbs, Ablative of Cause).

ABLATIVE OF THE PLACE FROM WHICH

233. 1. Place From Which is expressed by the Ablative with a preposition: dē finibus suis, Caes. B. G. I. 2, from their own boundaries; ēgredere aliquandō ex urbe, Cic. Cat. I. 10. 2, at last depart from the city.

2. The preposition is omitted with names of towns and small islands, and with domō, from home, humō, from the ground, and rūre, from the country: Rōmā rediī, I returned from Rome; domō exire nōlunt, they are unwilling to leave home. Relinquō takes the Accusative.

3. Even with names of towns, the preposition is regularly used to express distance from, or to indicate from the neighborhood of: iam Caesar ā Gergoviā discessisse audiēbātur, Caes. B. G. VII. 59, now Caesar was heard to have departed from the neighborhood of Gergovia; cum mīlia passuum circiter XXX ab Gergoviā abesset, Caes. B. G. VII. 38, when he was about thirty miles from Gergovia.

NOTES. — 1. If a noun, such as urbs or oppidum, is in apposition with the name of a town from which motion takes place, it takes a preposition with it: Cirtā ex oppidō Āfricae, from Cirta, a town of Africa.

2. In poetry, the place from which motion takes place may be expressed by the Ablative without a preposition, even if it is not the name of a town: frātrēs Lyciā missōs occīdit, he slays the brothers sent from Lycia.

234. 1. Ablative of Source or Origin. — With Participles denoting birth (ēditus, genitus, nātus, ortus, etc.) the Ablative alone (rarely with ex) is used to designate parentage or immediate descent; the Ablative with ab, to designate remote descent: Mercurius Māiā nātus est, Mercury was descended from Maia; amplissimō genere nātus, descended from a most illustrious line; Belgae sunt ortī ab Germānīs, the Belgians are of German descent.

2. With pronouns a preposition is used: ex nōbīs nātōs liberōs appellāmus, we call those born of us children.

235. Ablative of Material.—Material is expressed by the Ablative with ex (sometimes dē) or by an adjective: cīvica corōna fit ē fronde querneā, the civic crown is made of oak leaves; nāvēs tōtae factae ex rōbore, Caes. B. G. III. 13, ships made entirely of oak; triumphālēs corōnae sunt aureae, triumphal crowns are of gold.

236. Ablative of Separation.—The following verbs and their compounds regularly take the Ablative:—

1. pellere, dēpellere, expellere, movēre, dēicere, dēturbāre, cēdere, dēcēdere, excēdere: Caesar pellit Mārcum ex civitāte, Caesar drives Marcus from the state.

2. arcēre, prohibēre, excludere, intercludere, dēterrere, abstinere, dēsistere: arceat hostēs urbe, he keeps the enemy off from the city; dēfendit urbem ab hostibus, he defends the city from the enemy; rē frūmentāriā intercludī, Caes. B. G. I. 23, to be cut off from provisions.

3. liberāre, levāre, solvere: liberat Ītaliā rēgibus, he frees Italy from kings.

NOTES.—1. With these verbs the Person From Whom is expressed by the Ablative with ab. The Thing or Place From Which is expressed by the Ablative alone or by the Ablative with ab, dē, ex, under classes 1 and 2, while class 3 takes the simple Ablative.

2. The Place From Which gives the Point of View from which a thing is regarded: ab superiōre parte, Caes. B. G. II. 18, on the upper part; ab summō, Caes. B. G. II. 18, from the summit; ā tergō, in the rear.

3. The following verbs always take the Ablative with ab:—

1. Compounds of dīs and sē; as dīstinguere and sēparāre.
2. The verbs abhorrere, aliēnare, abaliēnare.

237. 1. The Ablative of Separation is also used with verbs of Depriving and Lacking: miles oculis privātus est, the soldier was deprived of his eyes; mortuī carent sēnsū, the dead are without feeling.

2. Adjectives of similar meaning also take this Ablative, but use ab with persons: animus cūrīs vacuus, a mind free from cares; rēs pūblica nūda est ā magistrātibus, the state is without magistrates.

NOTE.—Indigēō usually takes the Genitive: arma, quōrum indigēbat, weapons, of which he stood in need.

238. 1. Ablative of Specification.—This Ablative gives the precise point of view from which, or the feature in respect to which, a thing is considered: animō ignāvus, coward of soul; hī omnēs linguā, institūtis, lēgibus inter sē differunt, Caes. B. G. I. 1, all these differ from one another in language, customs, laws.

Common expressions are: māior nātū, older; minor nātū, younger; meā sententiā, in my opinion.

In like manner the Ablative is found in such phrases as ex lēge, according to law; ex mōre, according to custom.

2. This Ablative is also found with dignus, indignus, dignārī (Active, dignum iūdicāre): dignus est poenā, he deserves punishment.

239. 1. Ablative of Comparison.—The Ablative of Comparison is used with Comparatives instead of quam with the Nominative or the Accusative, but generally only after a negative or its equivalent: pater filiō doctior est, or pater doctior est quam filius, the father is wiser than the son; nihil est amābilius virtūte, there is nothing more lovable than virtue; celeriusque omnium opīniōne, Caes. B. G. II. 3, and more quickly than the expectation of everybody; quid est in homine ratiōne dīvīnius? in man what is more divine than reason?

2. The Ablative cannot take the place of quam with the Accusative, if the reference would be vague: Germanī gra- viōrēs hostēs sustinuērunt quam Rōmānōs, the Germans withstood worse enemies than the Romans (were).

On the other hand, when the word giving the point of view is a negatived relative, the Ablative must be used: Phīdiae simulācris, quibus nihil in illō genere perfectius vidēmus, cōgitāre tamen possumus pulchriōra, the statues of Phidias, than which we see nothing more perfect in their class, still allow us to imagine those that are more beautiful.

3. Plūs, minus, amplius, longius, are often used for plūs quam, minus quam, etc.: in eō proeliō occidērunt minus duo mīlia cīvium, in that battle fewer than two thousand citizens were slain.

ABLATIVE OF THE PLACE WHERE

240. 1. Ablative of Place. — Place Where is expressed by the Ablative, usually with in: in collibus, on the hills; in equō, on horseback; in ancoris, at anchor.

2. When the Ablative of Place contains also the added idea of Cause, Manner, or Means, no preposition is used: bellō, in (and by means of) war; legiōnem silvis occultat, he conceals the legion in (and by means of) the woods.

241. The following take the Ablative without a preposition: —

1. Names of Towns in the singular of the Third Declension and in the plural of all declensions: hic Tibure nātus est, ille Gabiis, one was born at Tibur, the other at Gabii; Athēnis Cratippum audiēbam, I used to hear Cratippus at Athens.

NOTE. — If urbs or oppidum is in apposition with the name of the town, in is used.

2. Substantives modified by medius, middle, tōtus, cūctus, omnis, whole: carcer mediā urbe aedificātur, a prison is being built in the middle of the city.

3. The expressions terrā marīque, by land and sea; dextrā, on the right; laevā, sinistrā, on the left; locō (usually with an attributive), locīs (always with an attributive): nōn nullīs locīs, in some places; parte, partibus (always with an attribute): utrāque parte Tiberis, on each side of the Tiber; regiōne (with a modifier), region.

242. 1. In the singular of the First and Second Declensions, names of Towns and Small Islands are put in the Locative of the Place Where: Rōmae rūs optās, at Rome you wish for the country; Lānuvī fuit, he was at Lanuvium.

2. Other Locative forms are domī, at home; humī, on the ground; bellī and mīlītiaē, in the phrases domī mīlītiaēque, in peace and in war, bellī domīque, at home and in the field; and rūrī, in the country.

3. Appositions are regularly expressed by the Ablative with in: mīlītēs Albae cōnstitērunt in urbe opportūnā, the soldiers halted at Alba, a conveniently situated town.

243. 1. Ablative of Time. — Time When or Within Which is expressed by the Ablative of all words that really denote time, such as tempus, aetās, pūctum temporis, hōra, diēs, mēnsis, annus, saeculum, vēr, aetās, nox, vīgilia: diē cōnstitūtā, Caes. B. G. I. 4, on the appointed day.

2. Other words, as well as those denoting the time of life, if accompanied by a modifier, are put in the Ablative alone; if not modified, in the Ablative with in: bellō Pūnicō secundō, in the Second Punic War, but in bellō, in war; prīmā pueritiā, in early youth, but in pueritiā, in youth.

3. Time within which: hīs paucīs diēbus, Caes. B. G. III. 17, within these few days; proximā nocte, Caes. B. G. III. 18, on the next night.

NOTE. — Occasionally the Ablative denotes Duration of Time: hōc tōtō proeliō, Caes. B. G. I. 26, throughout this whole battle.

ABLATIVE OF THE THING WITH WHICH

244. Ablative of Accompaniment. — Accompaniment is expressed by the Ablative, usually with cum: cum omnibus cōpiis Caes. B. G. II. 29, with all their forces.

The preposition is sometimes omitted in military phrases: omnibus cōpiis, with all his forces.

245. Ablative of Manner. — The Ablative of Manner answers the question “How?” and is used only of abstract nouns.

Nouns modified by adjectives are usually in the simple Ablative, while those not modified by adjectives usually take the Ablative with cum: hūc māgnō cursū contendērunt, Caes. B. G. III. 19, thither they came at full speed; vēnit cum celeritāte, he came with speed.

Words like modō, pactō, ritū do not take in.

246. Ablative of Quality or Descriptive Ablative. — The Ablative of Quality is used without a preposition, and always has a modifier: integrīs viribus militēs, Caes. B. G. III. 19, the soldiers with fresh strength.

Instead of the Ablative of Quality, the Genitive may be used, usually in the singular, with the attributives māgnus, tantus, summus, māximus: māgnī ponderis saxa, Caes. B. G. II. 29, stones of great weight.

NOTE. — Expressions of Measure, Number, Time, Space, and Weight are put in the Genitive only; parts of the body in the Ablative only. In other cases, either the Genitive or the Ablative may be used.

247. 1. Ablative of Means. — The Means or Instrument is expressed by the Ablative without a preposition: gladiō, with a sword; nāvibus trānsire, Caes. B. G. IV. 17, to cross on boats.

2. The Personal Agent of a passive verb is expressed by the Ablative with ab: expectantur ab his cōplae, forces are awaited by them; quārum rērum a nostris fieri nihil poterat, Caes. B. G. III. 4, none of which things could be done by our men.

For the Dative of the Agent, see 207.

3. The Person by Means of Whom is expressed by the Accusative with per: per speculātōrēs certior factus est, he was informed through (not by) scouts.

NOTES. — 1. Nitor, I support myself, and frētus, supported (= relying on), take an Ablative of Means.

2. Note the following peculiar phrases: proficisci pedibus, to go on foot; laccunt proeliō, they harass with strife; vincunt proeliō, they conquer in strife; sanguine pluisse senātui nuntiātum est, Cic. Div. II. 58, it was reported to the senate that it had rained blood; nāvi vehi, to sail; equō vehi, to ride; in equō, on horseback; ex equō pugnāre, to fight on horseback.

248. The Ablative of Measure or Degree of Difference answers the question "By How Much?" It precedes Comparatives and comparative ideas; as ante, post, infrā, suprā, citrā, ultrā, mālō, antecellō, praestō, superō. Examples of these Ablatives are quō, eō, quantō, tantō, multō, aliquantō, paulō, nihilō: biduō post Ariovistus ad Caesarem lēgātōs mittit, Caes. B. G. I. 47, two days afterward, Ariovistus sent ambassadors to Caesar.

249. Time Before or After is expressed by the Ablative of Measure with a cardinal or ordinal numeral with ante or post: tribus annis ante (post), or tribus ante (post) annis, three years before (after); aliquot diēbus ante, Caes. B. G. IV. 9, some days before; paucis ante diēbus, Caes. B. G. I. 18, a few days before; faciam idem, quod viginti annis ante Balbus fecit, I shall do the same thing that Balbus did twenty years before.

REMARK.—1. Note the phrases multō, nōn multō, nōn ita multō, paulō, brevī, aliquantō, with ante or post.

2. In answer to the question "How long before the present time?" we find the Ablative with the pronoun hīc, or the Accusative with abhinc: hīs quattuor decem annīs, or abhinc annōs quattuor decem, fourteen years ago.

250. Ablative with Verbs of Filling.—The Ablative is used with verbs of Filling, Abounding, and Equipping, and with a few adjectives of similar meaning: Arīōn nōminis suī fāmā omnēs terrās implēverat, Arion had filled all lands with the glory of his name; Germānia rivīs flūminibusque abundat, Germany abounds in streams and rivers; homō praeditus auctōritāte, a man endowed with authority.

251. Ablative of Price.—The Ablative is also used with verbs of Buying, Selling, Costing, Hiring, Renting, to indicate Price, whether definite or indefinite: multō sanguine Poenīs victōria stetit, the victory cost the Carthaginians much blood; vectīgālia parvō pretiō redēpta, Caes. B. G. I. 18, taxes purchased at a small price.

252. 1. This Ablative is used with opus est, there is need; the person feeling the necessity is put in the Dative: auctōritāte tuā nōbīs opus est, we need your influence.

2. If the thing needed is expressed by a neuter pronoun or an adjective, opus est is construed personally: multa opus sunt, many things are needful.

3. If the thing is expressed by a verb, the Infinitive or the Accusative with the Infinitive is used: quid opus est tam multa dicere? what is the need of saying so much?

253. Ablative with Verbs.—Here belongs the Ablative with ūtor, fruor, fungor, potior, vescor, and their compounds: eōdem ūsī cōnsiliō, Caes. B. G. I. 5, adopting the same plan; utī omnibus in vitā commodīs ūnā cum iīs fru- antur, Caes. B. G. III. 22, that they enjoy with them all privileges in life; fungitur officiō, he discharges his duty; potiri imperiō, Caes. B. G. I. 2, to get control of the supreme power; vescitur cāseō, he feeds on cheese.

254. Ablative of Cause. — The Ablative denotes Cause, chiefly with verbs of Emotion: exercitus famē interiit, the army perished through hunger; fortūnā amici gaudeō, I rejoice in my friend's fortune; et eō magis, Caes. B. G. I. 47, and the more for this reason; hīs rēbus fiēbat, Caes. B. G. I. 2, because of these things it resulted.

NOTES. — 1. Ob and propter with the Accusative are often used for the Ablative of Cause: ob eās causās mūnitiōnī T. Labiēnum praefēcit, for these reasons he placed T. Labienus over the fortification.

2. The Ablative with prae expresses a Preventing Cause: prae gaudiō ubi sim nēsciō, I know not where I am for joy.

ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE

255. With an Ablative, a participle, an adjective, or another substantive may stand predicatively; that is, it may be expanded into a clause. This construction is commonly called the Ablative Absolute.

Usually this Ablative does not refer to the same person or thing as the subject or the object of the leading verb. It is grammatically absolute, but logically has a connection with the rest of the sentence. The Ablative Absolute may express Time, Cause, Condition, Concession, etc.

1. Time: Caesar, expositō exercitū et locō castrīs idoneō captō, ad hostēs contendit, Caes. B. G. V. 9, the troops having been landed, and a suitable location for the camp secured, Caesar hastened against the enemy (= when the troops had been landed, or having landed the troops, etc.); ille Cicerōne cōsule mortuus est, he died during Cicero's consulship; praecēpit nē sē absente pūgnāret, he instructed him not to fight during his absence.

2. Cause: exiguā parte aestātis reliquā, Caesar in Britanniam proficisci contendit, Caes. B. G. IV. 20, a small part of the summer being left (= as only a small part of the summer remained), Caesar hastened to set out for Britain.

3. Condition: quā Sēquanīs invītīs propter angustias ire nōn poterant, Caes. B. G. I. 9, by which they could not go on account of the narrows, if the Sequani should be unwilling.

4. Concession: damnātus, quod sē vetante pūgnāset, condemned because he had fought, although forbidden by him.

5. Attendant Circumstance: Tarquinius bellum Rōmānis intulit, auxilium eī ferente Porsenā, Tarquin made war on the Romans, Porsena lending him aid (= with the aid of Porsena).

6. An Ablative of Attendant Circumstance, denoting with, under circumstances of, under, at, etc., is sometimes explained as an Ablative Absolute with omission of the participle: serēnō quoque caelō aliquandō tonat, sometimes also it thunders while the sky is clear; hanc urbem statuī malīs auspiciīs, I founded this city under unfavorable auspices.

7. The Ablative Absolute may contain more than one of the above ideas: acceptō aurō recessērunt, having received gold, they retired, = not only 'when they had received,' but also 'because they received' it.

For the Ablative with prepositions, see 258.

THE NOMINATIVE

256. The Nominative is used as the subject of a finite verb (see 171) and as a predicate (see 174).

THE VOCATIVE

257. The Vocative is used in address, either with or without an interjection: M. Tullii, quid agis? Cic. Cat. I. 27. 6, Marcus Tullius, what are you doing?

CASES WITH PREPOSITIONS

258. Originally, prepositions were adverbs. Later, in connection with certain cases of nouns or in composition with verbs, they acquired a special use. The preposition and the verb are written in one word, but not the preposition and the noun. Many of these prepositions still retain an adverbial use also: ante, previously; contrā, on the other hand; intrā, within, etc.

1. PREPOSITIONS WITH THE ACCUSATIVE ONLY

NOTE. — Usque, even, is often prefixed to ad and trāns: usque trāns montem, even across the mountain.

2. WORDS USED AS PREPOSITIONS

Propior, propius, proximus, proximē, are sometimes used with the Accusative. They take also the Dative, or the Ablative with ab.

Prīdiē, postrīdiē, clam, and usque may take the Accusative. Prīdiē and postrīdiē take the Genitive also.

3. PREPOSITIONS WITH THE ABLATIVE ONLY dē , from, of ē

ex (before vowels or h) palam , in the presence of

NOTE. — Cum is enclitic with the personal pronouns mē, nōbīs, tē, vōbīs, sē, and usually with the relative and interrogative pronoun: nōbīscum; quibuscum or cum quibus.

4. PREPOSITIONS WITH THE ACCUSATIVE AND THE ABLATIVE

In, in, on, into, until, and sub, under, up to, answering the question Whither? take the Accusative, and answering the question Where? take the Ablative.

THE VERB

259. Noun-Forms: Infinitive, Supine, Gerund.

Adjective-Forms: Gerundive, Present Active Participle, Future Active Participle, Perfect Participle Passive and Deponent.

THE INFINITIVE

260. Tenses of the Infinitive. — The tenses of the Infinitive denote time with reference to the verb on which they depend.

1. The Present Infinitive represents an act as present at the time of the verb on which it depends: crēdō eum scribere, I believe that he is writing; crēdebam eum scribere, I believed that he was writing.

NOTE. — Dēbuit, oportuit, potuit, with the Present (rarely the Perfect) Infinitive, represent the English ought to have, should have, could have: oportuit venīre, he ought to have come.

2. The Perfect Infinitive represents an act as prior to the time of the verb on which it depends: crēdō eum scripsisse, I believe that he has written; crēdebam eum scripsisse, I believed that he had written.

3. The Future Infinitive represents an act as subsequent to the time of the verb on which it depends: crēdō eum scriptūrum esse, I believe that he will write; crēdebam eum scriptūrum esse, I believed that he would write.

4. Periphrastic Future Infinitive. — In the passive voice, or if the verb has no participial stem, futūrum esse or fore with an ut clause is used instead of the Future Infinitive: Rōmāni spērabant fore ut Gallī vincerentur, the Romans hoped that the Gauls would be conquered.

This is more common than the so-called Future Passive Infinitive, -um iri.

NOTE. — A Future Perfect Passive (or Deponent) is formed by the Perfect Participle with fore: crēdō eam laudātam fore, I believe that she will have been praised.

261. Uses. — The Infinitive is an indeclinable neuter substantive, and stands to the finite verb of the sentence in the relation of Subject or Object. It also implies verbal action, and may have a subject of its own and an object in the same case as the object of the finite verb from which it is formed. It may also be modified by an adverb. It has two uses, — as Complement and in Indirect Discourse. In its complementary use the Infinitive has two tenses, the Present and the Perfect, referring to continuous and completed action, respectively. The Present is the tense generally used in the Complementary Infinitive. The Perfect also expresses attainment.

262. The Infinitive as Subject is found with esse and various impersonal verbs, such as piget, pudet, paenitet, taedet; decet, dēdecet; libet, licet; opus est, necesse est, oportet; dēlectat, iuvat; placet, displicet; praestat; interest and rēfert: māiōrī tamen partī placuit rei ēventum experīrī, Caes. B. G. III. 3, yet the majority determined to await the issue of the matter.

263. The predicate noun used with the Subject Infinitive is in the Accusative: senem ante tempus fierī miserum est, to become prematurely old is wretched.

NOTE. — Licet allows the Dative of the Person: mihi neglegentī esse nōn licet, I am not allowed to be negligent.

264. The Infinitive as Object is used with auxiliary verbs denoting Will, Power, Duty, Habit, Resolve, Inclination, Continuance, End, etc., and their opposites, as velle, malle, cupere; posse; dēbere; incipere, instituere, coepisse; pergere, perseverāre; dēsinerē, dēsistere, intermittere, omittere; cōnārī, audēre; cunctārī, morārī; dubitāre, verērī; studēre, contendere, festināre, mātūrāre, properāre; neglegere, nolle, nōn cūrāre; cōgitāre, in animō habēre; statuere, cōstituere, dēcernere, cōnsillium capere, animum indūcere; aduēscere, adsuēfacere, cōnsuēscere, solēre; docēre, discere, and many others: saltāre didicērunt, Cic. Cat. II. 23. 28, they have learned to dance.

265. The Predicate Noun or Adjective with the Object Infinitive is in the Nominative: omnēs student beātī fierī, all desire to become happy.

ACCUSATIVE WITH THE INFINITIVE

266. The Subject of the Infinitive is in the Accusative. If the Infinitive with a Subject Accusative takes a predicate noun, this noun also is in the Accusative: Thalēs Mīlēsīus aquam dīxit esse initium rērum, Cic. N. D. I. 10. 25, Thales of Miletus said that water was the first principle of things.

The Accusative with the Infinitive may be the subject or the object of a sentence.

267. As Subject. — The Infinitive with Subject Accusative is found usually as the subject of impersonal verbs and expressions, such as appāret, cōnstat, condūcit, expedit, prōdest, placet, displicet, oportet, interest; aequum, pār, iūstum est; apertum, manifestum, perspicuum est; fās, nefās, facinus, scelus est; fāma, opīniō, spēs est; necesse est, opus est; crēdibile, vērūm, vērī simile est; honestum, pulchrum, turpe, indignum est; and impersonal passives of verbs of Thinking, Declaring, Perceiving, and the like, such as intellegitur, nūntiātum est, putandum est, etc.: quam Gallōs obtinēre dictum est, Caes. B. G. I. 1, which it is said that the Gauls hold; crēdibile est hominum causā factum esse mundum, it is likely that the world was made for the sake of men; lēgem brevem esse oportet, it is necessary that a law be brief; trādītum est Homērum caecum fuisse, it is reported that Homer was blind.

NOTE. — Oportet and neesse est may take the Subjunctive: mē ipsum amēs oportet, it is necessary that you love me myself; tū mihi concēdās neesse est, Cic. Sull. 68. 16, it is necessary that you grant me.

268. As Object. — Verbs of Saying, Thinking, Knowing, Perceiving, and the like (verba sentiendī et dēclārandī) take as their object the Accusative and Infinitive. Some of the most common verbs are sentiō, animadvertō, audiō, videō; accipiō, comperiō; cōgnōscō, intellegō; cōgitō; arbitror, cēnsēō, crēdō, dūcō, existimō, iūdicō, opīnor, putō; spērō, suspīcor; sciō, nēsciō, ignōrō; meminī, recordor, oblīviscor; adfirmō, dīcō, negō, respondeō, scribō; fateor, dēclārō, dēmōnstrō, significō; simulō, dissimulō; narrō, trādō; doceō, ostendō, and such phrases as certiōrem faciō, inform; memoriā teneō, remember; and memoriae trādō (prōdō), hand down to memory: videō enim esse quōsdam, Cic. Cat. I. 8. 8, for I see that there are some; Ambarri Caesarem certiōrem faciunt sēsē nōn facile ab oppidīs vim hostium prohibēre, Caes. B. G. I. 11, the Ambarri informed Caesar that they could not easily ward off the force of the enemy from their towns.

269. If the verb of declaring has the force of an injunction, the Subjunctive with ut or nē is used: ōrābant nē longius prōgrederētur, Caes. B. G. IV. 11, they asked that he would not advance further.

NOTE. — But iubeō and vetō take the Present Infinitive.

270. Cēnsēō, meaning to resolve, determine, takes an ut clause: senātus cēnsuit ut quicumque Galliam prōvinciam obtinēret Aeduōs dēfenderet, Caes. B. G. I. 35, the senate decided that whoever obtained the province of Gaul should defend the Aeduans.

271. With cernō, videō, etc., the Participle is used to denote the immediate and actual action or condition of the object perceived: vidī puerōs māgnō studiō ludentēs, I saw the boys playing with great zeal.

272. Verbs of Hoping, Promising, and Swearing take the Accusative with the Future Infinitive, if the action is imminent. Posse and velle have a future force: spērō tē ventūrum esse, I hope that you will come; spērō tē venīre posse, I hope you will be able to come.

273. The Infinitive with the Accusative is the object: —

1. Of nōlō, mālō, volō, cupiō, when the subject of the Infinitive is not the same as the subject of the governing verb: volō is esse quem tū mē esse voluisti, I wish to be such a man as you have wished me to be.

But, even with the same subject, the Infinitive with the Accusative is used, if the fulfillment of the wish does not depend on the subject alone: volō hōc facere, I wish to do this; but sapientem civem mē et esse et numerārī volō, I want to be and be considered a wise citizen.

Volō and nōlō may take the Subjunctive: quid vīs faciam? what do you wish me to do?

2. Of iubeō and vetō. (See 269, Note.)

Where the name of the person on whom the command is laid is expressed, the Active Infinitive is used; where the name is omitted, the Passive Infinitive is used.

Accusative with Active Infinitive: quemque domō cibāria efferre iubent, Caes. B. G. I. 5, they order each one to take supplies from home.

Accusative with Passive Infinitive: obsidēs ad sē addūcī iussit, Caes. B. G. II. 5, he ordered hostages to be brought to him.

3. Of sinō and patior: Suēbī ad sē vīnum importārī omnīnō nōn sinunt, Caes. B. G. IV. 2, the Suevi do not allow wine to be imported to them at all.

4. Of Verbs of Emotion, such as gaudeō, doleō, mīror, admīror, indīgnor, queror, molestē (graviter, indīgnē) ferō: mīror tē ad mē nihil scribere, I wonder that you write me nothing; populī Rōmānī exercitum inveterāscere in Galliā molestē ferēbant, Caes. B. G. II. 1, they were vexed that the army of the Roman people was getting a foothold in Gaul.

These verbs may also be followed by a quod clause, which is the only construction admissible with verbs of Praise, Censure, Thanks, etc.: quod valēs gaudeō, I am glad that you are well; prīmum mihi grātiaē verbīs amplissimīs aguntur, quod . . . rēs pūblica māximīs periculīs sit liberāta, Cic. Cat. III. 14. 7, in the first place, thanks are rendered to me in most complimentary terms because the state has been saved from the greatest perils.

5. The Infinitive may take the place of an Accusative with verbs that have two Accusatives: filium equitāre docuī, I taught my son riding.

274. Passive.—The Personal Construction (Nominative with Infinitive) is used with:—

1. The passive in all persons of iubeō, vetō, sinō, videō, dīcō, putō, iūdicō, existimō: mīlitēs iubentur hōc facere, the soldiers are ordered to do this; tū vidēris beātus esse, you seem to be happy; lētītāvīsse Platōnem Dēmōsthenēs dīcitur, Demosthenes is said to have been in the habit of reading Plato.

2. The passive of ferunt, trādunt, in the third person only: quae nunc Samothrācia fertur, Verg. Aen. VII. 208, which is now called Samothrace.

275. Exclamatory Infinitive. — The Accusative with the Infinitive, in an apparently absolute sense, is found in Exclamations or Questions expressing Sorrow, Scorn, Surprise, Disgust, etc., -ne often being attached to some word in the clause: Tē nunc, mea Terentia, sic vērārī . . .! Cic. Ep. Fam. XIV. 2. 13, That you should be now thus harassed, my Terentia! Mēne inceptō dēsistere vīctam . . .? Verg. Aen. I. 37, (am) I, baffled, (to) give up my undertaking?

276. Historical Infinitive. — The Present Infinitive takes the place of an Imperfect Indicative, and has its subject in the Nominative: hostēs ex omnibus partibus signō datō dēcurrere, Caes. B. G. III. 4, at a given signal, the enemy ran down from all directions.

POETICAL USES

277. 1. The Infinitive is found with parātus, suētus, and their compounds, though these words usually take the gerund or gerundive construction in prose: adsuēfactī superārī, Caes. B. G. VI. 24, used to being conquered.

2. In poetry and late Latin many adjectives take the infinitive: cantārī dignus, Verg. Ecl. V. 54, worthy to be sung.

3. In poetry, the Infinitive may denote Purpose: tempus est abīre, it is time to go away.

NOTE.—In most of these uses the infinitive is equivalent to a Dative of Purpose.

THE PARTICIPLE

278. The Participle partakes of the nature of the Adjective and of the Verb.

279. Tenses. — The time of the Participle is relative to the time of the verb on which it depends.

1. The Present Participle denotes action contemporaneous with that of the verb on which it depends: tālia dīcentem Aenēān āversa tuštur, Verg. Aen. IV. 362, she gazes askance at Aeneas as he speaks thus.

2. The Perfect Participle denotes action prior to that of the verb on which it depends: hīs rēbus cōstitūtīs, in urbem redībō, when these matters shall have been settled, I shall return to the city.

3. The Future Participle denotes an action subsequent to that of the verb on which it depends: et sēsē medium iniēcit peritūrus in āgmen, Verg. Aen. II. 408, and, doomed to die, he flung himself into the midst of their ranks.

280. The place of a Present Passive Participle is sometimes supplied by a Gerundive; in past time by cum with the Imperfect Subjunctive: meō nōmine recitandō, Cic. Att. IV. 1, while my name was being read.

281. The place of a Perfect Active Participle is supplied: —

1. By a clause, usually temporal: quod ubi Caesar rescit, Caes. B. G. I. 28, when Caesar learned this (= Caesar having learned this).

2. By an Ablative Absolute (see 255): alius aliā causā inlātā, Caes. B. G. I. 39, one, one cause being alleged; another, another (= one alleging, etc.).

3. By the Perfect Participle of a deponent verb: Caesar Rēmōs cohortātus, Caes. B. G. II. 5, Caesar having encouraged the Remi.

4. By a Perfect Passive Participle, agreeing with the object of the main verb: hostēs item suās cōpiās ex castrīs ēductās instrūxerant, Caes. B. G. II. 8, the enemy also had drawn up their forces, led out from the camp (= the enemy also, having led out their forces from the camp, had drawn them up, or the enemy had led out their forces from camp and drawn them up).

5. The Passive Participles of some deponents and semi-deponents may have the force of Present Participles: secūtus hostēs, following the enemy.

6. Sometimes the participle of a deponent has a passive force: parum comitātus, Cic. Cat. II. 4. 21, slightly accompanied.

USES OF THE PARTICIPLE

282. The Participle may modify a noun either attributively or predicatively.

Attributively: in septentriōnem et orientem sōlem, Caes. B. G. I. 1, towards the north and the rising sun.

Predicatively: This participle may be expanded into a clause, and may denote Time, Concession, Cause, Condition, and various other relations.

TIME: Aristīdēs patriā pulsus Lacedaemonem fūgit, when Aristides was banished from his native land, he fled to Sparta.

CONCESSION: Miltiadēs capitis absolutus pecūniā multātus est, Miltiades, though acquitted of a capital charge, was mulcted in (a sum of) money.

CAUSE: Catilīna, metuēns prōditiōnem, ex urbe excessit, Catiline, fearing betrayal, fled from the city.

CONDITION: damnātum poenam sequi oportēbat, ut igni cremārētur, Caes. B. G. I. 4, if condemned, the punishment that he should be burned with fire was to follow.

If there is no grammatical connection with the rest of the sentence, the Ablative is used; this is the Ablative Absolute.

283. The Future Active Participle is regularly used in its Periphrastic Conjugation, but often stands independently when it denotes purpose; but this is rare in classical Latin: dēnsōs fertur moritūrus in hostēs, Verg. Aen. II. 511, resolved on death, he rushes into the crowds of the enemy.

284. With habeō and teneō. — Habeō (less often, teneō) takes the Perfect Passive Participle in the predicative construction with a force almost equivalent to that of a Perfect or Pluperfect Indicative, but the idea contained in the participle is regarded as a possession: quam plūrimās cīvitātēs suō beneficiō habēre obstrictās volēbat, Caes. B. G. I. 9, he wished to have as many states as possible attached to him by reason of his kindness; cōnstrictam iam hōrum omnium scientiā tenēri cōiūrātiōnem tuam nōn vidēs? Cic. Cat. I. 1. 8, do you not see that your conspiracy is now held fast bound in the knowledge of all these?

285. Present Participle with Special Verbs. — 1. Faciō, fiŋō, indūcō, mihi prōpōnō, take the Present Active Participle when they mean to represent, introduce, etc., in the language of history, description, or the stage: mihi prōposuī rēgnantem Lentulum, Cic. Cat. IV. 12. 17, I have pictured to myself Lentulus as reigning.

2. Videō and audiō may also take the Present Participle in a predicate sense: audiō tē clāmāntem, I hear you calling.

286. A noun and a Perfect Passive Participle in agreement with it are often used where an abstract noun and a limiting Genitive would be expected: ante urbem conditam, before the foundation of the city. But if the action is progressive or prospective, the Gerundive must be used. See 295. 2.

GERUND AND GERUNDIVE

287. The Gerund is a verbal noun; that is, it is a noun which has verbal uses. It usually governs other nouns.

The Gerundive is a verbal adjective; that is, it is an adjective which has verbal uses. It agrees with nouns.

288. The Gerund. — The Gerund is declined as a neuter singular noun of the Second Declension, but has neither Nominative nor Vocative. The Infinitive takes the place of the Nominative; and also of the Accusative when the Accusative is used without a preposition.

CASE USES OF THE GERUND

289. Genitive. — 1. With nouns: militēs pugnandī finem fēcērunt, the soldiers made an end of fighting.

2. With adjectives: cupidus sum scribendī, I am desirous of writing.

3. With causā or grātiā, denoting Purpose: Germānī ad Caesarem vēnērunt suī purgandī causā, Caes. B. G. IV. 13, the Germans came to Caesar for the purpose of exculpating themselves.

NOTE. — The Genitive of the personal pronouns is also used with the Genitive of the Gerund, as in the last example.

290. Dative. — The Dative of the Gerund is used as a Dative of Purpose, and is found with a noun, an adjective, or a verb: locus pugnandō idōneus erat, the place was suitable for fighting.

NOTE. — The Dative of the Gerund cannot take a direct object.

291. Accusative. — The Accusative of the Gerund is used only with prepositions, ad and in being the most common:

nostrī ad pūgnandum convēnērunt, our men assembled to fight.

NOTES. — 1. The Accusative of the Gerund does not admit of an object.

2. The Infinitive takes the place of the Accusative without a preposition: dīcit vidēre esse crēdere, he says that seeing is believing.

292. Ablative. — The Ablative is used with a preposition or alone. The Ablative without a preposition denotes Cause, Means, Instrument: mīlitēs pūgnandō fortēs fiunt, soldiers are made brave by fighting; lēx est rēcta ratiō in iubendō et vetandō, law is right rule in ordering and forbidding.

NOTE. — The Ablative with a preposition does not admit an object. Sine is never used with the Gerund. Ab, dē, ex, in are common.

293. Nominative. — The place of the Nominative of the Gerund is taken by the Infinitive: vidēre est crēdere, seeing is believing.

294. Object of a Gerund. — Only the Ablative (without a preposition) and the Genitive of the Gerund admit an object. This object is in the same case as the object of the verb would be.

THE GERUNDIVE

295. 1. The Gerundive is a verbal adjective of the First and Second Declensions. It denotes Obligation or Necessity. Occasionally it is used attributively, but generally predicatively.

Attributively: bellum agendum, war to be waged.

Predicatively: 1. With esse, forming the Passive Periphrastic Conjugation: Caesarī ūnō tempore omnia agenda erant, Caes. B. G. II. 20, Caesar had to do everything at once.

NOTE.—If the verb is intransitive, its Gerundive cannot have a personal use: nōbīs eundum est, we must go.

2. With dō, trādō, mittō, prōpōnō, relinquō, concedō, accipiō, suscipiō, permittō, locō, condūcō, tribuō, the Gerundive denotes the End to be Attained or the Object Effected: mūrōs reficiendōs cūrāvit, he saw to repairing the walls.

THE GERUNDIVE CONSTRUCTION

296. Usually the place of a transitive Gerund and its object is taken by a Gerundive and a noun with which the Gerundive agrees, the noun being put in the case of the Gerund which the Gerundive replaces.

Only transitive verbs and ūtor, fruor, fungor, and potior can be used in the Gerundive construction.

GERUND CONSTRUCTION

Caesar proelium committendī signum dedit, Caesar gave the signal for beginning the battle.

GERUNDIVE CONSTRUCTION

Caesar proeliī committendī signum dedit, *Caesar gave
the battle.*

297. The Gerundive construction is much more common than that of the Gerund with an object, and must be used, except in the Genitive, and in the Ablative without a preposition: triumvirī colōniae dēdūcendae creatī sunt, a commission of three was appointed for leading out a colony (here the Gerundive is used to avoid giving a direct object to the Dative of the Gerund); quī ad condūcendōs hominēs facultātēs habēbant, Caes. B. G. II. 1, who had means for hiring men; in commemorandā calamitāte, Caes. B. G. II.

28, in recounting the misfortune. (In these two examples the Gerundive is used to avoid giving a direct object to a Gerund used with a preposition.)

298. With neuter adjectives used as nouns, the Gerund is used to avoid ambiguity: fēmina est studiōsa audiendī multa, the woman is desirous of hearing many things.

299. In the Gerundive construction the Genitives meī, tuī, suī, nostrī, vestrī, have no distinction of gender or number: multī principēs civitātis Rōmā nōn tam suī cōservandī quam tuōrum cōnsiliōrum reprimendōrum causā profūgērunt, Cic. Cat. I. 7. 18, many leading men of the state fled from Rome, not so much for the purpose of saving themselves as for thwarting your plans.

300. The Dative of the Gerundive construction is common in certain phrases that have become formulas, such as studēre, operam dare, labōrem impertīre, praeesse, diem dīcere, locum capere; and in designations of official duty, such as decemvirī lēgibus scribendīs, trēs virī colōniae dēdūcendae, agrīs adsignandīs.

THE SUPINE

301. The Former Supine, or Supine in -um, is used with verbs of motion to denote the purpose of the motion. Occasionally it takes an object: Aeduī lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittunt rogātum auxilium, Caes. B. G. I. 11, the Aeduans send ambassadors to Caesar to ask aid.

302. 1. The Latter Supine, or Supine in -ū, is an Ablative of Limitation, though by some explained as a Dative of Purpose. It is used with fās, nefās, opus est, honestus, turpis, iūcundus, facilis, difficilis, incredibilis, mirābilis, optimus, ūtilis, etc.

2. The Supines most commonly used are auditū, visū, cōgnitū, dictū, factū, inventū, memorātū: miserābile visū, Verg. Aen. I. 111, miserable to be seen.

NOTE. — Facile cōgnitū, easy of understanding, may be expressed as follows: 1. rēs est facilis ad cōgnōscendū; 2. facile est rem cōgnōscere; 3. rēs facile cōgnōscitur; 4. rei cōgnitiō facilis est.

TENSES

TENSES OF THE INDICATIVE

303. There are two things to be considered: —

The Time of the action, — Present, Past, Future.

The Kind of action, — Undefined, Continuous, Completed.

304. Principal and Historical Tenses. — Principal or Primary Tenses refer to the present or the future. They are the Present, Future, Perfect, and Future Perfect. Historical or Secondary Tenses refer to the past. They are the Imperfect, Historical Perfect or Aorist, and Pluperfect.

THE PRESENT

305. 1. Undefined: dīcō, I speak.

2. Continuous: dīcō, I am speaking.

3. Conative, denoting attempted action: is ad plēbem P. Clōdium trādūcit, Cic. Ep. Att. I. 18, he tries to bring Publius Clodius over to the people.

4. The Historical Present, used in lively narration for the Historical Perfect: volat ille per āera māgnū, Verg. Aen. I. 300, he flew through the widespread air.

5. The Gnostic Present denotes something that is always true: virtūs et vitium inter sē differunt, virtue and vice differ from one another.

6. With iam diū, iam dūdum, iam pridem, the Present moves back in time to a Perfect, but represents the action as still going on: tē iam dūdum hortor, Cic. Cat. I. 12. 31, I have long been urging you.

7. With the force of a Future immediately at hand: cui rēs pūblica ā mē in manum trāditur, Cic. Mur. III. 13, into whose hand the state will be delivered by me.

THE IMPERFECT

306. 1. The Imperfect denotes the continuance of an action in past time: librum legēbam, I was reading a book.

The Imperfect gives details, while the Historical Perfect sums up results: Verrēs in Forum vēnit; ardēbant oculi; tōtō ex ore crūdēlitās ēminēbat, Cic. Verr. V. 62. 161, Verres came into the Forum; his eyes were blazing; cruelty was standing out from his whole countenance.

2. The Conative Imperfect denotes attempted, interrupted, intended, or expected action: num dubitās id mē imperante facere, quod iam tuā sponte faciēbās? Cic. Cat. I. 13. 34, do you hesitate to do at my order what you were already trying to do of your own motion?

3. The Imperfect denotes habitual or repeated action: certior fiēbat, Caes. B. G. II. 1, he was informed (from time to time).

4. The Imperfect with iam diū, iam dūdum, iam pridem, refers to an act continuing in past time, but which had begun some time before: ego māgnū in rē pūblicā versārī furōrem iam pridem vidēbam, Cic. Cat. IV. 6. 19, I had long seen that a widespread madness was abroad in the state.

5. The Imperfect denotes the beginning of an action: quō nunc ibās? whither now were you about to go?

THE PERFECT

307. The Perfect has two uses:—

1. It denotes an action completed in present time (Present Perfect): urbem praeclāram statuī, mea moenia vīdī, Verg. Aen. IV. 655, I have built a noble city, I have seen my walls arise.

NOTE.—The Perfects cōnsuevī, meminī, nōvī, ōdī, emphasize the state that results from the completion of an act, and have the force of Presents: I am accustomed, I remember, I know, I hate.

2. It is the usual tense of narration (Historical Perfect or Aorist): dēcrēvit quondam senātus, Cic. Cat. I. 4. 1, formerly the senate decreed.

3. The Historical Perfect (rather than the Imperfect) is used with a negative, or with a definite number. With a negative it means did not, while the Imperfect means would not, implying resistance to pressure: nōn dīxit, he did not speak; nōn dīcēbat, he would not speak.

308. Poetical Uses of the Perfect.—1. Instantaneous action: incubuere marī, Verg. Aen. I. 84, at once they settle on the deep.

2. A general truth (Gnomic Perfect): nēmo repentē fuit turpissimus, Juv., no one suddenly becomes very base.

THE PLUPERFECT

309. The Pluperfect denotes an action completed in past time: Helvētīī id, quod cōstituerant, facere cōnantur, Caes. B. G. I. 5, the Helvetians attempted to do that which they had decided on.

THE FUTURE

310. 1. Undefined: dīcam, I shall speak.

2. Continuous: dīcam, I shall be speaking.

THE FUTURE PERFECT

311. The Future Perfect denotes completed action in future time: dīxerō, I shall have spoken.

Latin is much more exact than English in the use of the Future and the Future Perfect in subordinate clauses. If the leading verb is Future, and the subordinate verb is contemporaneous with it, the subordinate verb is Future also; but if the subordinate verb is antecedent to it, then this subordinate verb is in the Future Perfect.

REPEATED ACTION

312. When two actions are repeated contemporaneously, both are put in the Present, Imperfect, or Future Indicative; when one is repeated before the other, it is put in the Perfect, Pluperfect, or Future Perfect Indicative. So also with Indefinite Relatives quisquis, quicumque, etc.

EPISTOLARY TENSES

313. In letters, the writer often uses a tense as it will appear to the reader, and so uses the Imperfect and the Perfect for the Present, and the Pluperfect for the Perfect: ex itinere scribēbam, I am writing on the journey; ego cōstitueram venīre in Puteolānum, I have determined to go to my seat at Puteoli.

The writer may also use the adverb of the reader; that is, he may use the adverb or the adverbial expression which would be appropriate to the reader: prīdiē Idūs Febr. haec scripsī ante lūcem; eō diē apud Pompōnium . . . eram cēnātūrus, Cic. Ep. Q. F. II. 3. 7, I am writing this on the day before the Ides of February; I am this day to sup with Pomponius. (In this sentence we should expect hōc for eō.)

In English the same principle appears in the use of come for go, the writer transferring himself to the time of the receiver. Thus the writer of a note may say, "I will come to your house to-morrow."

314. TENSES OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE

IN DEPENDENT CLAUSES

	Continuous	Completed
Principal or Primary	Present	Perfect
Historical or Secondary	Imperfect	Pluperfect

SEQUENCE OF TENSES

315. Principal (Primary) tenses are followed by Principal; Historical (Secondary) by Historical: that is, if the verb of the main clause is in a Principal tense, the verb of the dependent clause is in a Principal tense; if Historical, the verb of the dependent clause is Historical.

Principal Sequence:—

Cōnsul videt quid faciās, the consul sees what you are doing.

Cōnsul vidēbit quid faciās, the consul will see what you are doing.

Cōnsul viderit quid faciās, the consul will have seen what you are doing.

Cōnsul videt quid fēceris, the consul sees what you have done.

Cōnsul vidēbit quid fēceris, the consul will see what you have done.

Cōnsul viderit quid fēceris, the consul will have seen what you have done.

Cōnsul vīdit quid faciās, the consul has seen what you are doing. (Rare.)

Cōnsul vīdit quid fēceris, the consul has seen what you have done. (Rare.)

Historical Sequence: —

Cōnsul vidēbat quid facerēs, the consul saw what you were doing.

Cōnsul vīdit quid facerēs, the consul has seen (saw) what you were doing.

Cōnsul vīderat quid facerēs, the consul had seen what you were doing.

Cōnsul vidēbat quid fēcissēs, the consul saw what you had done.

Cōnsul vīdit quid fēcissēs, the consul has seen (saw) what you had done.

Cōnsul vīderat quid fēcissēs, the consul had seen what you had done.

PECULIARITIES OF SEQUENCE

316. 1. The Historical Present (305. 4) is usually considered a historical tense: Caesar, nē graviōrī bellō occurreret, ad exercitum proficīscitur, Caes. B. G. IV. 6, Caesar set out for the army that he might not meet with a very serious war.

2. In Result clauses (with ut, quī, quīn) the Present and Perfect Subjunctive occasionally follow Historical tenses: Alexander cum nūllō unquam hoste congressus est quem nōn vicerit, Alexander never fought with any enemy whom he did not conquer. But after verbs of Happening, such as accidit, fit, contigit, the Imperfect is always used.

The Imperfect is regularly used to denote a result as continuous or permanent.

3. A clause depending on a dependent clause takes the secondary sequence, if the main verb will allow: quod expectāvī iam sum adsecūtus ut vōs omnēs factam esse apertē confūratīōnem contrā rem publicam vidērētis, Cic. Cat. II. 6. 1, I have at last obtained what I have been waiting for; namely, that you should all see clearly that a conspiracy has been made against the state.

4. The Perfect Indicative is usually historical: ut urbi sine vestrō mōtū satis esset praesidī cōnsultum atque prōvisum est, Cic. Cat. II. 26. 3, care has been taken and provision made that there should be ample guard for the city without any movement on your part.

5. If a dependent Subjunctive gets its time from an Infinitive that depends on a verb of Saying or Thinking, the Subjunctive usually takes its tense from the verb of Saying or Thinking: videor ostendere quālēs deī sint, I seem to show of what nature the gods are.

6. But, with a Perfect Infinitive, the Subjunctive is usually put in the Imperfect or the Pluperfect: videor ostendisse quālēs deī essent, I seem to have shown of what nature the gods are. (In this sentence ostendisse represents a Perfect Indicative in the direct discourse, and is therefore followed by a secondary tense.)

REPRESENTATIONS OF THE FUTURE IN THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD

317. 1. In sentences of Purpose, after verbs of Fearing, and when the point of time has already been designated, the Future of the Subjunctive is supplied as follows: By the Present or the Imperfect Subjunctive, according to the law of Sequence of Tenses: valdē timeō nē patria pereat, I am very much afraid that our country will perish; Cicerō negat, si nātūram ducem sequāmur, unquam nōs aberrātūrōs, Cicero says that we shall never go astray, if we follow nature as a leader; Cicero negābat, si nātūram ducem sequerēmur, unquam nōs aberrātūrōs, Cicero said that we would never go astray, if we followed nature as a leader.

2. The Future Perfect is supplied by the Perfect or the Pluperfect Subjunctive, according to the law of Sequence of Tenses: Caesar prōmittit sē hōc factūrum esse, ubi primum ad tē vēnerit, Caesar promises that he will do this as soon as he comes to you; Caesar prōmisit sē hōc factūrum esse, ubi primum ad tē vēnisset, Caesar promised that he would do this as soon as he came to you.

3. Where the Point of Time has not already been designated, or where it is to be made very definite, the Present or the Imperfect of the Active Periphrastic Subjunctive is used, if the verb has a Future Participle: nōn dubitō quīn hanc rem cōfectūrus sis, I do not doubt that you will finish this affair; nōn dubitābam quīn hanc rem cōfectūrus essēs, I did not doubt that you would finish this affair.

This is most common in Indirect Discourse.

NOTE.—If the verb is in the Passive, or has no Future Participle, there is no regular Periphrastic form, but the Present or the Imperfect Subjunctive with mox, iam, brevī, postea, statim is used: nōn dubitō quīn haec res brevī cōficiātur, I do not doubt that this will be finished in a little while.

MOODS

THE MOODS IN INDEPENDENT SENTENCES

THE INDICATIVE

318. 1. The Indicative represents the statement as a reality, or asks a direct question: puer librum legit, the boy reads the book; legitne? does he read?

2. The Indicative is used in expressions of Power, Possibility, Obligation, Necessity: possum haec negāre, I might deny this.

3. The Indicative is used with such Impersonal expressions as decet, longum est, aequum est, etc.: nōn aequum est haec negāre, it would not be just to deny this.

THE IMPERATIVE (Negative nē)

319. The Imperative is the mood of Command, its tone ranging from positive injunction to piteous entreaty: ēgre dere ex urbe, depart from the city. Nē in classic prose is found only with the Future Imperative: hominem mortuum in urbe nē sepelitō nēve ūritō, Cic. Leg. II. 23. 58, thou shalt not bury nor burn a dead man in the city; nē percipite ea (poetical), do not notice that.

320. Tenses. — There are two forms of the Imperative, the Present and the Future. The Present Imperative has only the second person; the Future has the second and the third. The Future differs from the Present only in being a little more formal, and is regularly used in laws and treaties. When it occurs elsewhere, the command is made in a formal or authoritative way.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE

321. Hortatory Subjunctive (Negative nē). — The Hortatory Subjunctive is used in commands, exhortations, entreaties.

1. In the Present, first person plural: moriāmur, et in media arma ruāmus, Verg. Aen. II. 353, let us die and dash into the thickest of the fray.

2. In the Present, third person singular and plural: exeant, proficiscantur, nē patiantur dēsideriō sui Catilinam miserum t̄abēscere! Cic. Cat. II. 6. 6, let them depart, let them set forth, let them not permit poor Catiline to waste away through longing for his followers! illā sē iactet in aulā Aeolus! Verg. Aen. I. 140, let Aeolus strut in that court of his!

3. Occasionally in the second person singular Present with an indefinite you (172. 5) as subject: quidquid agis, pr̄denter agās et respice finem, whatever you do, do prudently, and look to the end.

4. Prohibition is expressed by the second person of the Perfect Subjunctive with nē: nē h̄oc f̄eceris, don't do this. Prohibition is also expressed by nōī with the Infinitive or cavē nē with the Subjunctive: nōī h̄oc facere, or cavē nē h̄oc faciās, don't do this.

322. Summary of Imperative Constructions. — 1. For the first person use the Present Subjunctive.

2. For the second person, if positive, use the Present Imperative; if negative, use nē with the Perfect Subjunctive, nōī with the Present Infinitive, or cavē nē with the Subjunctive.

3. For the third person, if positive, use the Present Subjunctive; if negative, use nē with the Present or Perfect Subjunctive.

323. Concession. — Concession may be expressed by the Subjunctive, the Present for present time and the Perfect for past time: antepōnātur Pompēius omnibus, Cic. Cat. IV. 21. 21, let Pompey be placed above all; d̄ixerit, suppose him to have said.

324. The Deliberative Subjunctive is used in questions that express doubt or that are asked simply for effect, the Present referring to present time and the Imperfect to past time. The negative is nōn: quid agam? what must I do? quid agerem? what was I to do? what should I have done?

NOTE.— In short questions the Indicative may be used. The test for a Deliberative Subjunctive is to see what the answer would be. If the answer would be an Imperative, use the Subjunctive in the question.

325. Optative Subjunctive (Negative nō).— The Subjunctive is used in Wishes: the Present and Perfect if the decision is in suspense; the Imperfect and Pluperfect if the decision is adverse; the Imperfect for present time and the Pluperfect for past time. The Present often takes utinam; the Imperfect and the Pluperfect always take utinam, or some other particle of wishing. The Perfect is rare: utinam tibi istam mentem dī immortalēs duint! Cic. Cat. I. 22. 4, may the immortal gods give you such a purpose! utinam tibi istam mentem dī immortalēs darent! O that the immortal gods would give you such a purpose! utinam tibi istam mentem dī immortalēs dedissent! would that the immortal gods had given you such a purpose!

NOTE.— As an introduction to the Optative Subjunctive we have velim, nōlim, mālim, vellem, nōllem, māllem: velim redeat, may he return; vellem redisset! O that he had returned!

326. Asseverations.— Similar to this is the Subjunctive in Asseverations: ita mē dī ament, ut ego nunc nōn tam meā causā laetor quam illius, may the gods so love me as I now rejoice, not so much on my own account as his.

327. Potential Subjunctive (Negative nōn).— The Potential Subjunctive represents the speaker's opinion as an opinion. The tone varies from surmise to certainty. This Subjunctive is sometimes taken as the apodosis of a condition whose protasis is omitted, but usually there is no definite ellipsis. The Present or Perfect is used for present time; the Imperfect for past time: hōc Ithacus velit, Verg. Aen. II. 104, the Ithacan would wish this; forsitan requirās, Verg. Aen. II. 506, perhaps you may ask; maesti militēs — crēderēs victōs — rediērunt in castra, the soldiers returned to the camp in sadness — you would have thought them conquered.

NOTE.—The Imperfect is used of only a few verbs, such as dīcere, crēdere, putāre, vidēre, cernere, and only then with the imaginary you as a subject: putārēs, one might have thought.

MOODS IN DEPENDENT CLAUSES

PURPOSE CLAUSES (FINAL CLAUSES)

328. Purpose Clauses express Purpose or Design. Their verb is in the Subjunctive. In pure Purpose Clauses, purpose is suggested by the introductory particle, ut affirmative and nē negative: ede ut vivās, eat that you may live; hōc dīcō nē fallāris, I say this that you may not be deceived.

For the Relative Clause of Purpose, see 382. 3.

329. Ut nē is a more emphatic form for nē. Often, however, it is simply pleonastic: senātus dēcernēbat ut ante, quam rogātiō lāta esset, nē quid agerētur, Cic. Ep. Att. I. 14, the senate decreed that nothing should be done before the bill was passed.

330. If the second of two purpose clauses is negative, it is usually introduced by nēve (neu): veniam ut tuae pristinae virtūtis memoriam retineās neu perturbēris animō, I shall come that you may retain the memory of your former valor, and not be disturbed in mind.

331. Quō introduces a clause containing a comparative: quō gravius hominēs ex commūtātiōne rērum doleant, Caes. B. G. I. 14, that men may grieve all the more from a change in their circumstances.

332. The purpose of the mention of the action suggests a stronger statement while declining to make it: ac nō longum sit, Cic. Cat. III. 10. 1, and not to be lengthy.

In this construction the Infinitive cannot be used, as in English.

SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES OF PURPOSE (COMPLEMENTARY FINAL CLAUSES)

333. A Substantive Clause is one that denotes some case-relation with a verb, usually that of subject or object. In these clauses the idea of purpose is suggested by the verb on which the purpose clause depends.

Substantive clauses of Purpose are used with verbs of Asking, Demanding, Encouraging, Admonishing, Advising, Commanding, Urging, Permitting; such as rogō, orō, petō, precor, obsecrō; postulō, flāgitō; hortor, adhortor, cohortor; moneō, admoneō; suādeō, persuādeō; mandō, ēdicō, imperō, praecipīō; impellō, incitō, moveō, permoveō, addūcō; concēdō, permittō. The subordinate clause here may be considered as coming from an Imperative of Direct Discourse.

1. Clause as Subject: hīs persuādērī ut diūtius morārentur neque suīs auxilium ferrent nōn poterat, Caes. B. G. II. 10, these could not be persuaded to delay longer and not carry aid to their friends; ut erat eī praeceptum ā Caesare nē proelium committeret, Caes. B. G. I. 22, as he had been ordered by Caesar, not to join battle.

2. Clause as Object: cīvitātī persuāsit ut dē finibus suīs cum omnibus cōpiīs exīrent, Caes. B. G. I. 2, he persuaded the state to leave their territory with all their forces; Ariovistus postulāvit nē quem peditem ad conloquium Caesar addūceret, Caes. B. G. I. 42, Ariovistus demanded that Caesar should not bring any foot-soldier to the interview.

3. Apposition: mea lēnitās hōc exspectāvit, ut id, quod latēbat, ērumperet, Cic. Cat. II. 27. 20, my forbearance has had this in view, namely, that that which was concealed might burst forth.

NOTE. — Iubeō, I command, and vetō, I forbid, take the Infinitive.

334. Substantive clauses of Purpose are used with verbs of Wishing, Caring for, Striving, Bringing about, Obtaining; such as optō; cūrō, prōspiciō, prōvideō; contendō, labōrō; faciō, efficiō, perficiō; adsequor, cōsequor, impetrō: cūrā ut valeās, see to it that you keep well; sē id contendere et labōrāre nē ea ēnūntiārentur, Caes. B. G. I. 31, that they were striving and toiling that those things should not be made known.

335. Verbs of Hindering, Preventing, etc., take the Subjunctive with nē and quō minus (also written quōminus), when positive; they have quō minus or quān when negative. The most usual of these verbs are impediō, dēterreō; obsistō, resistō, obstō, repugnō, interdicō; caveō; recūsō: impedior dolore animi nē plūra dicam, by grief of mind I am prevented from saying more; nāvēs ventō tenēbantur quō minus in eundem portum venīre possent, Caes. B. G. IV. 22, the ships were prevented by the wind from coming into the same harbor.

336. With expressions of Fearing, the Subjunctive is used with nē affirmative, and ut or nē nōn negative; regularly nē nōn is used after a negative or an interrogative with a negative force: nē eius supplicio Divitiaci animum offenderet verēbātur, Caes. B. G. I. 19, he was afraid that by punishing him he would wound the feelings of Divitiacus; timeō ut sustineās, I fear that you cannot stand it; timēre nōn dēbeō nē nōn iste illā cruce dignus iūdicētur, Cic. 2 Verr. V. 171, I ought not to fear that he will not be considered worthy of that cross.

RESULT CLAUSES (CONSECUTIVE CLAUSES)

337. Result Clauses show the Consequence or Tendency of an action.

In pure Result clauses, tendency is suggested by the particles ut, ut . . . nōn, and quān (quān after a negative).

For the Relative Clause of Result, see 382. 4.

338. The principal clause often contains correlative demonstratives, such as tālis, tantus, tot, tam, tantopere, totiēns, is, ita, sīc, eō, adeō, usque eō: in eō statū rēs nostrae sunt ut nōn possint esse miseriōrēs, our affairs are in such shape that they cannot be worse; atque haec omnia sīc agentur ut bellum sēdētur, Cic. Cat. II. 28. 1, and all this shall be so managed that the war shall be stopped.

339. Result clauses are common after a comparative with quam meaning too: clārior rēs erat quam ut tegī ac dissimulārī posset, the matter was too clear to be covered up and concealed.

340. Result clauses also depend on the impersonal tantum abest (āfuit): tantum abest ab eō ut malum mors sit ut verear nē hominī sit nihil bonum aliud, Cic. Tusc. I. 76, so far is death from being an evil that I fear man has no other blessing.

The forms of absum in this construction are generally impersonal.

SUBSTANTIVE RESULT CLAUSES (COMPLEMENTARY RESULT CLAUSES)

341. Here the tendency is suggested by the verb on which the clause depends. These clauses usually depend on verbs of Effecting. The negative is nōn or nē.

Substantive clauses of result are used: —

1. With verbs of Causation: facere, efficere, perficere; adsequi, cōsequi; prōficere, impetrāre, valēre, committere, tenēre, adipisci, praestāre, ferre (with cōsuētūdō, nātūra, fortūna), adferre, adiuvāre, expugnāre, extorquēre, exprimere: nātūra adfert ut eīs faveāmus, nature causes us to favor them.

2. With verbs of Compelling, Permitting, and impersonal verbs of Happening and Following; with impersonal phrases similar in meaning to these verbs: cōgere, adigere, impellere, dūcere and its compounds; movēre, commovēre; permittere, sinere, concēdere, dare; fit, accidit, contingit, obtingit, evenit, sequitur; additur, accēdit, restat, reliquum est, appāret; rārum est, vērī simile est, and many others: hōc certā de causā nōndum addūcor ut faciam, Cic. Cat. I. 5. 29, for a certain reason, I am not yet induced to do this; vērū concēdō tibi ut ea praetereās, but I permit you to pass over this; accidit ut esset lūna plēna, Caes. B. G. IV. 29, it happened that the moon was full; accēdit eōdem ut etiam ipse candidātus tōtum animum atque omnem cūram, operam dīligentiamque suam in petitiōne nōn possit pōnere, Cic. Mur. 45. 1, to this is added that not even the candidate himself can give all his attention and all his care, his personal exertion and diligence, to his canvass; an vērī simile est ut cīvis Rōmānus aut homō liber quisquam cum gladiō in Forum dēscenderit ante lūcem? Cic. Sest. 78. 16, or is it likely that a Roman citizen or any free man would have resorted to the Forum, weapon in hand, before daylight?

3. With verbs and phrases of Hindering, Preventing, Refusing, Delaying, Doubting, etc., the Complementary Result Clause is used with quān and quō minus. Quān is used after a negative: neque abest suspiciō quān ipse sibi mortem cōnsciverit, Caes. B. G. I. 4, and suspicion is not lacking that he committed suicide; nōn dubitō quān brevī sit Trōia peritūra, I do not doubt that Troy will soon be destroyed; negārī nōn potest quān turpius sit fallere quam falli, it cannot be denied that it is more disgraceful to deceive than to be deceived; nōn esse dubium quān tōtius Galliae plūrimum Helvētīf possent, Caes. B. G. I. 3, that there was no doubt that the Helvetians were the most powerful of all Gaul; neque recūsātūrōs quō minus perpetuō sub illōrum dīciōne atque imperiō essent, Caes. B. G. I. 31, and that they would not refuse to be under their control and power forever.

NOTE. — Dubitō with the Infinitive generally means to hesitate: dubitās vitāre, Cic. Cat. I. 17. 20, do you hesitate to avoid?

TEMPORAL CLAUSES

342. General Principle. — If the Temporal Clause simply defines the time of the action of the clause on which it depends, it takes the Indicative; but if the circumstances of the action are also implied, the verb of the Temporal Clause is in the Subjunctive. This may be taken as a general rule, subject to many exceptions.

TEMPORAL CLAUSES WITH postquam, ut, ETC.

343. Temporal Clauses introduced by ut, ubi, quandō-que, quandōcumque, postquam, simul ac (simul atque), and other conjunctions, take the Indicative, as the clauses are merely temporal: postquam id animum advertit, Caes. B. G. I. 24, after he directed his attention to this.

1. The Perfect or the Historical Present is used of a single act: ut Catilina paucis ante diebus erupit ex urbe, Cic. Cat. III. 3. 25, when Catiline broke forth from the city a few days ago.

2. The Perfect often has the force of a Pluperfect: simul atque adsedit partem istam subselliōrum nudam atque inanem reliquerunt, Cic. Cat. I. 16. 10, as soon as you had taken your seat, they left that part of the benches bare and empty.

3. The Pluperfect is used of repeated acts; also with postquam referring to a single act, if the interval of time is specified: ut quisque istius animum offenderat, in lautumias statim coniciēbatur, 2 Verr. 5. 143, whenever any one had given him offense, he was at once thrown into the quarries; Hannibal tertio anno postquam domo profugerat, in Africam rediit, Hannibal returned to Africa the third year after he had fled from home.

4. The Imperfect is used of overlapping action; i.e. of action continued into the time of the principal clause: ubi nemo obvius ibat, ad castra hostium tendunt, when (they found that) no one was coming to meet them, they proceeded to the camp of the enemy.

TEMPORAL CLAUSES INTRODUCED BY cum

344. Following the general principle for Temporal Clauses, cum with a strictly temporal force takes the Indicative, while circumstantial cum takes the Subjunctive.

345. Cum referring to the Present or the Future takes the Indicative: cum suis finibus eos prohibent, Caes. B. G.

I. 1, while they are keeping them off from their borders; dē hīs rēbus, ōtiōsī cum erimus, loquēmur, we will speak about these matters when we are at leisure.

346. Cum with the Indicative (Past Time) is used:—

1. To fix the point of time: cum Caesar in Galliam vēnit, alterius factiōnis prīncipēs erant Aedui, Caes. B. G. VI. 12, when Caesar came into Gaul, the Aeduans were leaders of the one faction.

2. With an Iterative force: et cum sē inter equitum turmās insinuāvērunt ex essedīs dēsiliunt, Caes. B. G. IV. 33, and whenever they have worked their way between the troops of cavalry, they leap down from their chariots.

NOTE.—In Livy the Imperfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive are common with this force.

3. When cum is put in what is logically the main clause: vix ea fātus erat cum scindit sē nūbēs, Verg. Aen. I. 586, scarcely had he said this, when the cloud burst.

347. Cum Circumstantial with the Subjunctive (Imperfect and Pluperfect) describes the time by natural events, when, while, as soon as: ipsī comprehēnsī ad mē, cum iam dilūcēsceret, dēdūcuntur, Cic. Cat. III. 6. 4, they themselves, having been arrested, were brought before me when day was just beginning to dawn.

348. Cum Historical, in narration, describes the occasion or circumstances of an action: Caesar cum ab hoste nōn amplius passuum XII milibus abesset, . . . ad eum lēgātī revertuntur, Caes. B. G. IV. 11, when Caesar was not more than twelve miles distant from the enemy, the ambassadors returned to him.

NOTE.—The Imperfect and Pluperfect are the only tenses used; the Imperfect for contemporaneous, the Pluperfect for antecedent action.

Often, however, the Subjunctive is used where the idea is chiefly temporal, the circumstantial idea being involved to only a slight degree, if at all: cum esset Caesar in citiōre Galliā, crēbrī ad eum rūmōrēs adferēbantur, Caes. B. G. II. 1, while Caesar was in hither Gaul, frequent rumors were brought to him. In this the cum-clause seems to be purely temporal.

In past time cum takes the Subjunctive much more frequently than the Indicative. In Caesar the proportion is more than 10 to 1.

TEMPORAL CLAUSES WITH antequam, dum, ETC.

349. Antequam, priusquam, dōnec, dum, and quoad, introducing clauses merely temporal, take the Indicative, but where purpose is implied they take the Subjunctive.

350. Antequam and priusquam take the Indicative to denote an actual fact: antequam ad sententiam redeō dē mē pauca dīcam, Cic. Cat. IV. 20. 1, before I return to the motion, I shall say a few words about myself; nec prius ille est relictus locus quam finis est pūgnandī factus, nor was that position abandoned before an end was made of fighting.

NOTE.—Antequam and priusquam are often written as in the last sentence.

351. Antequam and priusquam take the Subjunctive if the action is purposely anticipated; or, after a negative, purposely awaited: antequam dē rē publicā dīcam, expōnam cōnsillium, before I speak of the state, I will set forth my plan; Gallī nōn prius ducēs dīmittunt quam ab hīs sit con- cessum arma utī capiant, Caes. B. G. III. 18, the Gauls did not send away the chieftains before the latter had consented to take up arms.

1. The Imperfect Subjunctive is often found with a Historical tense: priusquam quicquam cōnārētur, Divitiacum vocārī iubet, Caes. B. G. I. 19, before he risked anything, he ordered Divitiacus to be summoned.

352. Dum, while, takes the Indicative, usually the Historical Present: dum Caesar morātur lēgātī vērunt, Caes. B. G. IV. 22, while Caesar delayed, the ambassadors came.

353. Dum, as long as, may take any tense: ille erat ūnus timendus ex istīs omnibus, sed tam diū, dum urbis moenibus continēbātur, Cic. Cat. III. 16. 9, he alone was to be feared of all those, but only so long as he was held in by the walls of the city.

354. Dum, dōnec, and quoad, until, take the Indicative to denote an actual event; the Subjunctive to denote anticipation or expectation: pūgnāvērunt hostēs dum dux interfectus est, the enemy fought until their leader was slain; dum hostēs veniant, morābor, I shall wait until the enemy come.

CAUSAL CLAUSES

355. Cum Causal takes the Subjunctive: quae cum ita sint, Catilīna, perge quō coepistī, Cic. Cat. I. 10. 1, since this is the case, Catiline, go whither you started.

356. Quandō takes the Indicative: quandō hōc miserius esse nihil potest, omittam, since nothing can be more wretched than this, I will pass it over.

357. Quod, quia, quoniam take the Indicative when the writer or speaker states the reason on his own authority; the Subjunctive, when he refuses to be held accountable for it and refers it to some one else. This is the Subjunctive of Repudiated Statement: graviter eōs accūsāt quod ab iis nōn sublevētur, Caes. B. G. I. 16, he bitterly censures them because (as he claims) he was not assisted by them; doleō quia dolēs, I am grieved because you are.

358. A hypothetical reason takes the Subjunctive; the real reason, the Indicative: pugilēs ingemiscunt, nōn quod doleant, sed quia omne corpus intenditur, Cic. Tusc. II. 23, boxers groan, not because they are in pain, but because the whole body is put to the stretch.

SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES WITH quod

359. These clauses take the Indicative. They are usually found:—

1. In apposition with hōc, id, illud, eō, ex eō, inde, etc.: ex tōtā laude Rēgulī illud est admirātiōne dignum, quod captīvōs retinendōs cēnsuit, of all the praise paid Regulus this is worthy of admiration, that he voted for keeping the captives.

2. With facere, fit, accidit, ēvenit, modified by bene, male, commodē, opportunē: bene facis, quod litterās voluptātibus antepōnis, you do well in preferring letters to pleasures.

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

360. A Conditional or Hypothetical sentence contains two clauses: the Condition or Protasis (the if-clause), and the Conclusion or Apodosis (the then-clause): thus, sī hōc dīcis, errās, if you say this, you are in error, is a conditional sentence, of which sī hōc dīcis is the condition and errās the conclusion.

361. Conditional Particles.—Sī, if, is the usual particle. The negative of sī is nisi or sī nōn; sī nōn being used to negative a single word, and nisi to negative the entire condition.

1. Si nōn is usual when the condition is concessive, or when the affirmative form of the same verb as that of the conclusion precedes: si nōn moderātē, at certē populārīter, Cic. Sest. 37. 24, if not with moderation, at least in the interests of the people; ēdūc tēcum etiam omnēs tuōs; si minus, quam plūrimōs, Cic. Cat. I. 10. 4, lead out with you also all of your followers; if not all, as many as possible.

NOTE. — Minus takes the place of nōn where the verb is not repeated.

2. Nisi adds an exception or a restriction to the leading clause, and is common after negatives; it is often strengthened by forte, vērō: nisi vērō si quis est, Cic. Cat. II. 6. 3, unless, indeed, there is some one; et iam diū nihil tē iūdicat nisi dē parriōidiō suō cōgitāre, Cic. Cat. I. 17. 26, and (your country) has for a long time been of opinion that you think of nothing save her destruction.

3. Sin excludes the preceding condition; it is often strengthened by autem, aliter, minus, vērō, secus: hunc mihi timōrem ēripe; si est vērū, nē opprimar; sin falsus, ut tandem aliquandō timēre dēsīnam, Cic. Cat. I. 18. 40, take away from me this fear; if it is true, that I may not be crushed; but if false, that I may finally cease to fear.

CLASSES OF CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

362. There are three classes of Conditional Sentences: Logical, Ideal, Unreal.

363. Logical Condition (Condition of Fact or Probability). — 1. This is by far the most common condition. It refers to the past, the present, or the future. The condition is stated as a fact, positive or negative, or as a probability.

Mood: Indicative in both clauses. Tense: Any.

SĪ hōc dīcis, errās, if you say this, you are in error; sĪ peccāvī, insciēns peccāvī, if I did wrong, I did so unwittingly; sĪ hōc dīxeris, errābis (errāveris), if you say this, you will be in error.

2. The condition may take the indefinite you of the Subjunctive Present or Perfect, with the force of an Indicative: (senectūs) plēna est voluptātis, sĪ illā sciās ūtī, Sen. E. M. 12. 4, (old age) is full of pleasure, if you know how to use it.

3. The conclusion may be an Imperative or an independent Subjunctive: "dēsūlīte," inquit, "mīlitēs, nisi vultis aquillam hostibus prōdere," Caes. B. G. IV. 25, "leap down," said he, "soldiers, unless you wish to betray the standard to the enemy."

4. The Future Perfect in the conclusion is rare. When used, it implies that the action of its verb will be completed at the same time as that of the condition, although the latter began first: sive hōc statueritis, dederitis mihi, Cic. Cat. IV. 11. 1, if you adopt this, you will at once give me.

364. Ideal Condition (Condition of Possibility).— This is the least common of the conditions. It refers to future time and denotes possibility. From the standpoint of the English, it may be generally recognized by were to or should in the condition.

Mood: Subjunctive. Tense: Present. Sometimes the Perfect is used (to denote completed action).

SĪ hōc dicās, errēs, if you were to say this, you would be mistaken; haec sĪ tēcum, ita ut dīxī, patria loquātur, nōnne impetrāre dēbeat? Cic. Cat. I. 19. 1, if your fatherland should talk with you, just as I have said, ought she not to obtain her request?

365. The Latins often use the Ideal Condition where the contents of the sentence would indicate the Unreal. All depends upon the view of the speaker or writer, or his choice in the form of presentation.

The Imperative and the Future Indicative are often found in the conclusion, where the idea of futurity is to be made prominent.

366. Unreal Condition (Condition Contrary to Fact).— Here the condition is represented as unreal, impossible, contrary to fact.

Mood: Subjunctive in both clauses. Tense: Imperfect for present time; Pluperfect for past time.

Servi mehercule mei si me isto pacto metuerent, ut te metuunt omnes civis tui, domum meam relinquendam putarem, Cic. Cat. I. 17. 13, by Hercules, if my slaves feared me as all your fellow-citizens fear you, I would think that I ought to leave my home; at si hoc idem P. Sestius dixissem, mihi senatus vim et manus intulisset, Cic. Cat. I. 21. 30, but if I had said this same thing to Publius Sestius, the senate would have laid violent hands on me.

367. The Imperfect Subjunctive, denoting a continuous act or state, sometimes refers to the past: ego si hoc optimum factum iudicarem, unius usuram horae gladiatoris isti ad vivendum non dedissem, Cic. Cat. I. 29. 3, if I had thought (and still thought) that this were best to be done, I would not have given that bully the use of one hour of life.

368. The conclusion may be in the Imperfect or Perfect Indicative, in expressions of Ability, Obligation, Necessity, Desirability, Propriety, the Imperfect referring to both present and past time: dēlērī potuit exercitus, sī quis aggredī ausus esset, the army could have been destroyed, if any one had dared to attack it.

369. The Indicative of either Periphrastic Conjugation may be used in the conclusion: nisi vīnum dēfēcisset, multō plūra et graviōra dictūrī fuimus, if the wine had not given out, we would have said a great many more and more serious things.

370. Mixed Conditions.— Often the condition is of one class, the conclusion of another: nōs autem fortēs virī satis facere rei pūblicae vidēmur, si istius furōrem ac tēla vitēmus, Cic. Cat. I. 2. 17, but we, brave men! seem to be doing enough for the state, if we avoid his fury and weapons (= the fury of his weapons). Here we have the Subjunctive in the condition, the Indicative in the conclusion. Quōs quidem ego sī ullō modō fierī possit, nōn tam ulcisci studeō, Cic. Cat. II: 17. 5, these indeed, if it can be done in any way, I desire not so much to punish. Here we have the Subjunctive in the condition, the Indicative in the conclusion; but the meaning of studeō conveys contingency.

371. Incomplete Conditional Sentences.— Sometimes the conditional particle is omitted: ūnum cōgnōris, omnēs nōris, (if) you know one, you know all.

372. The condition is expressed in a word or a phrase: sic dēnique victor . . . mittēre, Verg. Aen. III. 439, thus at length you shall be sent as victor. Here sic = sī id fēcēris, if you do this. Ut explorātā victōriā, sarmentis virgultisque conlētis, quibus fossās Rōmānōrum compleant, ad castra pergunt, Caes. B. G. III. 18, as if victory were assured, collecting fagots and twigs with which to fill up the trenches of the Romans, they advanced against the camp. (Here the condition is expressed in the Ablative Absolute, explōrātā victōriā.)

373. Some other word may take the place of the particle: haec āra tuēbitur omnēs, aut moriēre simul, Verg. Aen. II. 523–4, this altar shall protect us all, or (= if not) you shall die with us.

374. To assign any condition in English to its proper class, consider the following table: —

Past	Present	Future
Logical	Logical	Logical
Unreal	Unreal	Ideal

Observe that in past or present time, if the action is not contrary to fact, the condition is Logical; for the future, unless the protasis has were to or should, the condition is Logical.

To recognize a condition in Latin when complicated by Indirect Discourse, remember that the Logical is the most common. The sense will generally make it plain, if it is Unreal. The Ideal is the least common, and is less definite than the Logical.

375. Conditional Clauses of Comparison. — The conclusion is omitted in comparisons with ac sī, ut sī, quam sī, quasi, tamquam sī, velut sī, tamquam, velut, ceu, as if: —

Mood: Subjunctive. Tense: usually determined by the sequence rather than the apparent condition: loquor quasi ego illud fēcerim, Cic. II. Verr. 1. 29, I speak as if I had done that; respondit tamquam sī esset cōsul, he replied as if he were consul.

376. Proviso (Negative nē). — Dum, modo, and dum modo, with the Subjunctive, denote a Proviso: dīcatur sānē electus esse ā mē, dum modo eat in exsilium, Cic. Cat. II. 15. 16, for all I care, let him be said to have been cast out by me, provided he goes into exile.

CONCESSIVE CLAUSES

377. Concession may be expressed by the Hortatory Subjunctive: sit Scīpiō clārus, Cic. Cat. IV. 21. 13, grant that Scipio is famous.

378. 1. The clauses usually known as Concessive clauses are more properly Adversative clauses, and are introduced by licet, quamvis, ut, nō, cum, etiam sī, etsī, tametsī, quamquam, with the general sense of although. They are regularly followed by a yet-clause, the whole statement being that a certain thing follows, despite the occurrence of something that has a tendency to prevent it. In these clauses ut often means but so that, ita being usually expressed either in the principal clause or at the beginning of the ut-clause: ut tamen artum solveret hospitīis animum, Hor. Bk. II. Sat. VI. 82, yet not without opening his close breast in acts of hospitality.

2. Licet, quamvis, ut, nō, take the Subjunctive; but quamvis with the Indicative is common in Horace and late prose: licet fremant omnēs, ego nōn tacēbō, though all complain, I shall not keep silent.

NOTE. — Quamvis with the positive of an adjective or adverb denotes a high pitch: itaque ad quemvis numerum ephippiatōrum equitum quamvis paucos adire audent, Caes. B. G. IV. 2, and so, no matter how few in number, they dare attack any number of cavalry with housings.

3. Etiam sī takes both the Indicative and the Subjunctive, but the Subjunctive is the more common.

4. Etsi and tametsi usually take the Indicative, but sometimes the Subjunctive.

5. Quamquam usually takes the Indicative.

NOTE. — In principal clauses quamquam has a corrective force, modifying a previous statement that is too strong or intensifying one that is too weak. It is translated and yet. Tametsi has a like use.

6. Cum Concessive takes the Subjunctive: cum ab hōrā septimā ad vesperum pūgnātum sit, āversum hostem vidēre nēmō potuit, Caes. B. G. I. 26, though the battle lasted from the seventh hour until evening, no one could see an enemy's back.

379. The Future sometimes has a concessive force: excūdent alii spīrantia mollius aera, Verg. Aen. VI. 847, others may fashion images of brass that breathe more gently.

RELATIVE CLAUSES

380. Relative clauses are introduced by relative pronouns, adjectives, or adverbs. The relative clause, when used simply as an adjective, takes the Indicative: virum canō qui in Ītaliā vēnit, Verg. Aen. I. 1, I sing of the hero who came into Italy.

381. Iterative relatives and relatives used with an iterative force take the Indicative: quae sārari poterunt quācumque ratiōne sārābō, Cic. Cat. II. 11. 41, what can be healed I will, by all possible means, heal.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE IN RELATIVE CLAUSES

382. When the clause implies Concession, Cause, Purpose, Result, Characteristic, the Subjunctive is used: —

1. CONCESSION: Nomadumque petam cōnūbia quōs sim totiens iam dēdignāta maritōs? Verg. Aen. IV. 536, and shall

I seek marriage with the Numidians whom I have so often spurned as suitors?

2. CAUSE: infēlix quī nōn spōnsae praecepta furentis audierit! Verg. Aen. II. 345, unfortunate in not listening to the warnings of his inspired betrothed!

NOTE. — The causal force is intensified by ut, utpote, as, quippe, namely.

3. PURPOSE: equitātum praemittit quī videant, Caes. B. G. I. 15, Caesar sent forward cavalry to see.

4. RESULT: turrēs tōtō opere circumdedit quae pedēs LXXX inter sē distarent, Caes. B. G. VII. 72, around the whole work he placed towers which were eighty feet apart.

NOTE. — In a result clause, the relative is equivalent to ut with a demonstrative or a personal pronoun.

5. CHARACTERISTIC: habēs ubi ostentēs, Cic. Cat. I. 26. 18, you have an opportunity to display.

383. Characteristic. — The usual ideas are those of Character or Fitness, the thought seeming to be that the relative attaches some permanent characteristic to the antecedent. The Subjunctive (consecutive) is the regular mood: —

1. With a definite antecedent where the character is emphasized. This is regularly the case with dīgnus, indīgnus, aptus, idōneus, is, tālis, ēiusmodī, tam, tantus, ūnus, sōlus: nōn tū is es quī hōc nēsciās, you are not the man to be ignorant of this; Caesar idōneus esse vidētur quī rem publicam administret, Caesar seems to be a suitable man to manage the state.

2. With an indefinite antecedent or its equivalent: sunt quī putent, there are some who think.

3. After comparatives with quam, as an object clause: quod nōn longius hostēs aberant quam quō tēlum adicī pos- set, Caes. B. G. II. 21, because the enemy were not more than a javelin's throw away.

4. After a negative or an interrogative that implies a negative answer, quīn is often used for quī nōn: quīs est quīn cernat quanta vīs sit in sēnsibus? who is there that does not see how much force there is in the senses? nēmō erat quī nōscīret, there was no one who did not know.

5. Here belong such phrases as quod sciam, so far as I know.

QUESTIONS

DIRECT QUESTIONS

384. Questions are asked by interrogative pronouns and adverbs, or by interrogative particles. The mood of the question is the mood of the answer that is expected or suggested.

1. A Sentence-Question relates to the action itself, and can be answered by yes or no.

2. A Word-Question has an interrogative word, and cannot be answered by yes or no.

3. A Rhetorical Question does not expect an answer; it makes a statement in the form of a question.

385. 1. Interrogative Particles. — In a Sentence-Question the enclitic -ne is attached to the emphatic word. It usually suggests nothing as to the nature of the answer: tūne huic crēdis? do you believe this fellow?

2. -ne is sometimes equivalent to an emphatic nōnne: meministine mē dicere? Cic. Cat. I. 7. 8, do you not remember that I said?

3. Nōnne expects an affirmative answer; it usually comes first in the sentence. If there are several parts to the question, nōn is used in all save the first: nōnne hunc in vincla dūcī, nōn ad mortem rapī, nōn summō suppliciō mactārī imperābis? Cic. Cat. I. 27. 12, will you not order this man to be put into chains, to be hurried away to death, to be put to death with the most severe torture?

4. Num expects a negative answer; it comes first in a sentence: num mē fefellit? Cic. Cat. I. 7. 12, did it escape me?

5. An introduces the second part of a disjunctive question; that is, a question giving a choice between two, while aut gives the continuation of a simple question. The first part of this disjunctive question may be gotten from the context, or it may be expressed, utrum or -ne being the particle: vōsne vērō L. Domitium an vōs Domitius dēseruit? Caes. B. C. II. 32, indeed did you desert Lucius Domitius or did Domitius desert you? (this implies that one or the other is true); timēsne Pompēium aut Caesarem? do you fear Pompey or Caesar? (this does not necessarily imply that you fear either of them); an vērō P. Scipiō T. Gracchum interfēcit? Cic. Cat. I. 3. 20, (am I wrong,) or did Publius Scipio slay Tiberius Gracchus?

NOTE. — Or not is expressed by an nōn: isne est quem quaerō an nōn? is he the man I am looking for or not?

386. 1. The answer "Yes" is expressed: —

(1) by repeating the emphatic word: audīsne mē? — Audiō, do you hear me? — Yes.

(2) by ita, ita est, ita vērō est, etiam, factum, vērū, sãnē, sãnē quidem, etc.

2. "No" is expressed by repeating the emphatic word with nōn, minimē, minimē vērō, etc.: sōlus vēnistīne? — Nōn sōlus, did you come alone? — No.

NOTE. — Immō conveys a correction, and either removes a doubt or heightens a previous statement, — yes indeed, nay rather.

387. 1. Peculiarities. — Quid is often used alone, to indicate surprise or indignation, or to draw attention to what follows, which is usually a question: quid? Cic. Cat. I. 8. 23, what (do you think of this statement I am about to make)?

2. Quid enim, in Cicero, is used after a general statement to introduce a refutation of an objection, and is always followed by a question: sī ista aegritūdō perturbāre animū sapientis nōn potest, nūlla perturbātiō poterit. Quid enim? Metusne conturbet? if such sickness cannot disquiet the mind of a wise man, there can be no disquiet. What then? Shall fear annoy?

3. Ut in direct questions is colloquial: ut valēs? how is your health?

INDIRECT QUESTIONS

388. Indirect Questions are substantive clauses that depend on verbs of Asking, Saying, Knowing, etc. They are introduced by interrogative pronouns and adverbs. Mood: Subjunctive: quis sim, sciēs ex eō quem ad tē misī, Cic. Cat. III. 12. 40, who I am you shall learn from him whom I have sent to you.

389. It is important to distinguish in English between a dependent Interrogative and a Relative clause. In the case of the Interrogative, the whole clause is the object (or subject) of the leading verb; in a Relative clause the antecedent of the Relative is the object (or subject) of the leading verb. An Interrogative clause involves a direct question; a Relative does not.

	Interrogative	Relative
Who	quis	quī
What	quid	quod
When	quandō	cum, ubi

390. The same interrogative particles are used as in the direct question :—

1. Num means whether: interrogās mē num in exsilium (supply tē ire iubeam), Cic. Cat. I. 13. 35, you ask me whether (I order you to go) into exile.

2. Sī, whether, is used after verbs and sentences denoting Attempt and sometimes after verbs of Asking: Aenēās petit Anthea sī quem iactātum ventō videat, Verg. Aen. I. 181, *Aeneas strives (to see) if he can see anything of Antheus tossed by the storm; sī posset praebere rogātus, Hor. Ep. I. 6. 41, *being asked if he could furnish.

3. Or not is expressed by necne, but an nōn is the more common if the latter alternative contradicts the former: dī utrum sint necne sint quaeritur, Cic. N. D. III. 17, the question is whether there are gods or not.

4. An is used with haud sciō, nēsciō, đubitō, incertum est, to express the probable alternative, the improbable alternative being omitted: nēsciō an amplius mihi negōtīf contrahātur, Cic. Cat. IV. 9. 6, probably more trouble is being prepared for me.

NOTE.—The interrogative may be in a participial clause: quam ūtilitātem petentēs scīre cupimus illa quae occulta nōbīs sunt, Cic. Fin. III. 11. 37, seeking what good do we desire to know what is hidden from us (= what good do we seek that we, etc.).

5. Expressions like nēsciō quis, some one (I know not who), are sometimes used like indefinite pronouns and do not affect the construction.

6. Two or more interrogatives may be used in the same sentence: quem sī interficere voluisset, quantae quotiēs occāsiōnēs quam praeclārae fuērunt, and if he had wished to kill him, what great opportunities there were, how excellent, how often!

INDIRECT DISCOURSE

(ŌRĀTIŌ OBLĪQUA)

391. Direct Discourse (Ōrātiō Rēcta) gives the speaker's exact language, while Indirect Discourse gives the substance:—

DIRECT

Hīs Caesar ita respondit:
“Hōc mihi minus dubitātiōnis datur, quod eās rēs quās vōs, lēgātī Helvētīī, commemorāstis memoriā teneō.”

To them Caesar replied as follows: “For this reason I have less hesitation, because I remember the things which you, Helvetian ambassadors, have mentioned.”

INDIRECT

Hīs Caesar ita respondit:
“Eō sibi minus dubitātiōnis dari, quod eās rēs quās lēgātī Helvētīī commemorāssent memoriā tenēret.”

To them Caesar replied as follows: “That for that reason he had less hesitation, because he remembered the things which the Helvetian ambassadors had mentioned.”

NOTES.—1. Sometimes the verb of saying is not expressed.

2. Negō is used for dīcō nōn.

3. For Verbs of Fearing, see 336.

4. For dubitō with negative or interrogative, see 341. 3.

MOODS IN INDIRECT DISCOURSE

392. Declarative Sentences.—When a change is made from the Direct to the Indirect Discourse, after a verb of Saying, Thinking, or Knowing, the clause which was the principal clause in the Direct Discourse takes its verb in the Infinitive (with a Subject Accusative), while the subordinate clauses take the Subjunctive.

DIRECT

Caesar hōc fēcit, Caesar did this.

Agrum dābō in Ītaliā, Āfricā, Hispāniā, ubi quisque volet.

I will give land in Italy, Africa, Spain, wherever each one wishes it.

INDIRECT

Dicō Caesarem hōc fēcisse, I say that Caesar did this.

Agrum respondet sēsē datūrum esse in Ītaliā, Āfricā, Hispāniā, ubi quisque velit.

He replies that he will give land in Italy, Africa, Spain, wherever each one wishes it.

NOTES.—1. The conjunction that of English is not translated in Latin.

2. The Infinitive is sometimes found in a relative clause, when the relative is felt as a principal clause, and may be replaced by a demonstrative with a coördinating conjunction.

3. Explanatory subordinate clauses are not considered as part of the Indirect Discourse, and do not change their mood: videō duās adhūc esse sententiās, ūnam D. Silāni, quī cēnset eōs, quī haec dēlēre cōnātī sunt, morte esse multandōs, Cic. Cat. IV. 7. 1, I see that so far there are two opinions, one that of Decimus Silanus, who proposes that those should be put to death who have attempted to destroy this city (cōnātī sunt is explanatory).

393. Imperative Clauses (Principal).—Imperatives and Imperative Subjunctives take the Subjunctive in Indirect Discourse, nē being the negative: imperāvit ut obsidēs redderet, he ordered that he should return the hostages. (In the Direct Discourse, redde.)

NOTES.—1. Iubeō and vetō take the Present Infinitive.

2. Use vetō instead of iubeō nōn.

394. Interrogative Clauses (Principal).—An Indirect (or Dependent) Question takes the Subjunctive: quid proximā, quid superiōre nocte ēgeris, ubi fueris, quōs convocāveris, quid cōnsiliī cēperis, quem nostrum Ignōrāre arbitrāris? Cic. Cat. I. 1. 9, who of us do you think does not know what you did last night, what you did the night before, where you were, whom you assembled, what plan you formed?

395. Rhetorical Questions. — If the verb of the rhetorical question was in the Indicative in the Direct Discourse, in changing to the Indirect the first and third persons are put in the Infinitive, while the second person is put in the Subjunctive:—

DIRECT

Quod si veteris contumēliae oblivisci volō, num etiam recentium iniuriarum memoriam dēpōnere possum?

But if I am willing to forget the old insult, can I also lay aside the remembrance of fresh wrongs?

Quid tandem verēbimini?
Why, pray, should you fear?

INDIRECT

Rogāvit, quod si veteris contumēliae oblivisci vellet, num etiam recentium iniuriarum memoriam dēpōnere posse.

He asked if he could also lay aside the remembrance of fresh wrongs, if he were willing to forget the old insult.

Rogāvit quid tandem verērentur. He asked why, pray, they should fear.

TENSES IN INDIRECT DISCOURSE

396. For tenses of the Infinitive, see 260; for tenses of the Subjunctive, apply the law for Sequence of Tenses.

397. In Indirect Question. — 1. If the Direct Discourse had the Present Indicative, the Indirect has the Present or Imperfect Subjunctive.

2. If the Direct had the Perfect Indicative, the Indirect has the Perfect or Pluperfect Subjunctive

3. If the Direct had the Future Indicative, the Indirect has -ūrus sim or -ūrus essem.

398. In Subordinate Clauses. — 1. If the Direct Discourse had the Present Indicative, the Indirect has the Present or Imperfect Subjunctive.

2. If the Direct had the Perfect Indicative, the Indirect has the Perfect or Pluperfect Subjunctive.

3. If the Direct had the Future Indicative, the Indirect has the Present or Imperfect Subjunctive.

4. If the Direct had the Future Perfect Indicative, the Indirect has the Perfect or Pluperfect Subjunctive.

GENERAL RULES FOR CHANGING TO INDIRECT DISCOURSE

399. 1. All verbs, pronouns, and possessive adjectives in Indirect Discourse are of the third person.

2. Hic usually changes to ille, and nunc to tum.

3. The first person plural is retained when it refers to the Roman people (see Caes. B. G. I. 44).

4. The reflexive subject of the Infinitive must be expressed: mē, tē, nōs, vōs, sē: dīcō mē valēre, I say that I am well; dīcis tē valēre, you say that you are well; dīcit sē valēre, he says that he is well.

PARTIAL OBLIQUITY (INFORMAL INDIRECT DISCOURSE)

400. The subordinate clause of Indirect Discourse may occur when the principal clause is merely implied, or is not expressed in the usual way (Infinitive); this is common after verbs of Fearing and as part of an Indirect Question: Themistoclēs nocte ambulābat quod somnum capere nōn posset, Themistocles used to walk about at night, because (as he said) "he could not sleep."

CONDITIONS IN INDIRECT DISCOURSE

Logical Conditions

402. Condition: Subjunctive, the tense depending on the law of the Sequence of Tenses.

Conclusion: Indicatives become corresponding Infinitives:—

DIRECT

SĪ peccō, insciēns peccō, if I am doing wrong, I do so unwittingly.

SĪ hōc crēdēbās, errāvistī, if you believed this, you were in error.

SĪ id crēdēs, errābis, if you believe that, you will be in error.

SĪ id crēdideris, errābis, if you believe that, you will be in error.

Dīcō tē, sĪ id crēdās, errātūrum esse.

Dīxī tē, sĪ id crēderēs, errā-tūrum esse.

Dīcō tē, sĪ id crēdideris, errā-tūrum esse.

Dīxī tē, sĪ id crēdidissēs, errātūrum esse.

Ideal Conditions

403. Condition: Subjunctive, the tense depending on the law of Sequence of Tenses.

Conclusion: Becomes Future Infinitive.

Sī id crēdās, errēs, if you were to believe that, you would be in error.

Dicō tē, sī id crēdās, errātūrum esse.

Dixī tē, sī id crēderēs, errātūrum esse.

Unreal Conditions

404. Condition: Remains unchanged.

Conclusion: Imperfect Subjunctive becomes Future Infinitive; in the Passive it is expressed by futūrum esse (fore) followed by ut with the Imperfect Subjunctive. The Pluperfect Subjunctive becomes the Infinitive in -ūrus fuisse; with verbs which have no Future Participle and for all verbs in the Passive, futūrum fuisse ut with the Imperfect Subjunctive is used.

NOTES.—1. The law of Sequence of Tenses does not affect this condition.

2. While the Imperfect here refers to present time, it is generally regarded as Historical.

DIRECT

Sī id crēderēs, errārēs, if you believed this, you would be in error.

Sī quid mihi ā Caesare opus esset, ego ad illum vēnissem, if I had needed anything from Caesar, I would have gone to him.

Dixit, sī eōrum aetās potuisset esse longinquior, futūrum fuisse ut omnibus perfectis hominum vīta ērudīta esset, if their term of life could have been longer, the lives of men would have been polished with the perfection of all arts and all learning. artibus, omni doctrīnā, hominum vīta ērudirētur, he said that if their term of life could have been longer, the lives of men would have been polished with the perfection of all arts and all learning.

NOTE.—If the conditional sentence depends on a construction that requires the Subjunctive, the Pluperfect active becomes -ūrus fuerim.

SUBJUNCTIVE BY ATTRACTION

405. A subordinate clause depending on a Subjunctive or an Infinitive is put in the Subjunctive by Attraction, if the two clauses form essential parts of a whole: quicquid increpuerit, Catilinam timēri nōn est ferendum, Cic. Cat. I. 18. 37, it is not to be endured that Catiline is to be feared at the slightest noise (lit. whatever rustles).

SPECIAL USES OF NOUNS

406. Concrete for Abstract.—1. Denoting a Period of Life: ā puerō = ā pueritiā, from boyhood.

2. In designations of Office: Caesare cōnsule = in cōnsulātū Caesaris, in Caesar's consulship.

3. The name of a People for a Country: in Segūsiāvōs, Caes. B. G. I. 10, into the country of the Segusiavi.

407. Abstract for Concrete in a collective sense: lūxuriā, Cic. Cat. II. 5. 5, high livers; coniūrātiōnis, Cic. Cat. I. 6. 4, conspirators; latrōciniō, Cic. Cat. I. 31. 5, a band of brigands.

408. Plural for Singular.—The plural of abstract nouns may be translated as singular or as "acts of": libidinēs, Cic. Cat. II. 10. 14, (acts of) lust; audāciae, Cic. Cat. II. 10. 14, (acts of) recklessness.

409. Use of Plural. — When reference is made to several persons or things, the Latin is often very exact in the use of the plural: Caesar Gallōrum animōs verbis cōfirmāvit, Caes. B. G. I. 33, Caesar encouraged the minds of the Gauls with words.

410. Generic Plural. — The plural is used in such sentences as this: quārē imitēmur nostrōs Brūtōs, Camillōs, etc., Cic. Sest. 143. 12, therefore let us imitate men like our Brutus, Camillus, etc.

SUBSTITUTES FOR PREPOSITIONAL PHRASES

411. 1. A Genitive: exsul patriae, a refugee from his country.

2. An Adjective: terrēnus tumulus, a mound of earth.

3. A Relative clause: pōns qui in flūmine est, a bridge over a river.

ADJECTIVES

412. Adjectives as Nouns. — 1. In the plural, masculine adjectives denote Classes or Kinds of men: boni, the good, the loyal; docti, the learned; nostrī, our men.

2. In the plural, neuters are usually found only in the Nominative or Accusative. They denote things: parva, small things; bona, property.

NOTE. — The feminine is not used for things unless rēs is expressed. Where the masculine and neuter would be alike, rēs is often used, to avoid ambiguity: multārum rērum, instead of multōrum.

3. In the singular, masculines are rare unless limited by a pronoun: quīdam stultus, a certain base fellow.

4. In the singular, neuters are usually found with the Partitive Genitive: aliquid novi, something new.

5. Constant use has given some adjectives the force of nouns: adversārius, opponent; amicus, friend; aquārius, waterman; cōgnātus, kinsman.

413. Sometimes the adjective has the translation of an adverb: servus vēnit laetus, the slave went joyfully.

414. When the verb to be has an Infinitive or a clause for its subject, a predicate adjective is put in the neuter gender: hūmānum est errāre, to err is human.

415. A plural noun may be modified by two singular adjectives: secundus et tertius ōrdinēs, the second and third ranks.

416. If the subject denotes a thing, the predicate adjective may be in the neuter, regardless of the gender of the subject: immānitās sceleris incredibile est, the enormity of the crime was (an) incredible (thing).

417. A predicate adjective is occasionally neuter, when it refers to nouns of different genders.

418. Agreement with the Sense. — A predicate adjective may get its gender from the idea suggested by the subject: pars ex urbe expulsī sunt, a part were driven from the city.

EQUIVALENTS FOR THE ADJECTIVE

419. Where our idiom expects an adjective, we sometimes find: —

1. A Genitive: amor frātris, fraternal love.
2. An abstract noun with a Genitive: ex annālium vetustāte, from old records.
3. An adverb: tūtō esse, Cic. Cat. I. 19. 8, to be safe.
4. A case of Hendiadys: mōlem et montēs, Verg. Aen. I. 61, massive mountains.

PECULIARITIES OF THE ADJECTIVE

420. An adjective cannot be used directly with a proper name save as a cognomen: Alexander Māgnus, Alexander the Great; L. Caesar, vir fortissimus, Cic. Cat. IV. 13. 41, Lucius Caesar, a man most brave.

421. An adjective may represent a Subjective, an Objective, or a Possessive Genitive: mortālia facta, the deeds of men; externae victōriae, Cic. Cat. IV. 22. 28, of victory over an enemy; domus rēgia, the king's house.

422. Adjectives denote Race: Miltiadēs Athēniēnsis, Miltiades the Athenian.

423. Such adjectives as primus, medius, summus, ūltimus, extrēmus, infimus (imus) denote parts of the modified word: summus mōns captus est, the top of the mountain was taken.

424. Primus, prior, postrēmus, and ūltimus are often equivalent to a relative clause: āc prior inquit, Verg. Aen. I. 321, and she was the first who spoke.

425. The Latin often uses a connective between two adjectives where our idiom omits it: multi et fortēs viri, many brave men.

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

426. The Comparative is regularly used in contrasting two objects; but sometimes it is equivalent to too, rather, somewhat, unusually: sī qua rēs erat māior, Cic. Sest. 105. 31, if there was any matter of unusual importance.

427. The Superlative often denotes a very high degree of comparison: homō doctissimus, a very learned man.

428. The Comparative may be intensified by multō, aliquantō, paulō, etiam, while the Superlative is intensified by longē, ūnus, vel, etiam, paulō: multō māior, much greater; ūnō māximō, Cic. Cat. III. 25. 32, the very greatest.

429. In comparing two attributes of the same person or thing, the comparative, or magis with the positive, is used in both members: hic homō est ditior quam sapientior, this man is richer than wise.

THE VERB

430. The Passive often has a reflexive force: nōn fallor, I do not deceive myself; occāsiō datur, the opportunity presents itself.

431. The Passive of deponent and defective verbs is supplied by the corresponding verbal noun with esse or venire: esse admirātiōnī (invidiae, odiō), to be admired (envied, hated); venire in invidiam (odium, suspiciōnem), to be envied (hated, suspected).

PRONOUNS

PERSONAL PRONOUNS

432. 1. The Nominative is expressed only when emphatic: nōs cōsulēs dēsumus, Cic. Cat. I. 3. 32, we consuls are remiss.

2. The "editorial we" occurs, as in English: tametsi vidēō quanta tempestās invidiae nōbis impendat, Cic. Cat. I. 22. 4, and yet I see how great a storm of unpopularity threatens us.

3. Nostrum and vestrum, which are regularly used as Partitive Genitives, when used with omnium take the place of the possessive: ad omnium nostrum vitam salutemque, Cic. Cat. I. 14. 21, to the life and safety of us all.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS

433. 1. The possessive is expressed only when emphatic or when the meaning would be vague without it: haec meā voluntāte fēcit, he did this with my consent.

2. A Genitive is regularly in apposition with a possessive, ipsius being used for special emphasis: meā ūnīus (or ipsius) operā haec fēcī, I did this unaided.

3. The possessive is often equivalent to the Genitive of the personal pronoun: nostrā tamen, quī remānsissēmus, caede tē contentum esse dicēbās, Cic. Cat. I. 7. 22, yet you said you were satisfied with the slaughter of us who had remained.

THE REFLEXIVE PRONOUN

434. In simple sentences, sē and its possessive suus refer to the subject: Caesar sē ad suōs recēpit, Caesar returned to his men (lit. took himself back to his men).

NOTE. — Distinguish clearly between self as a substantive and self as an adjective. Himself is ipse when agreeing with a noun or a pronoun: Caesar ipse dīxit, Caesar himself said it; it is sē when a substantive: sē occīdit, he killed himself.

435. Mē and nōs are the reflexives of the first person; tē and vōs of the second.

NOTE. — Where the meaning is clear, suus, particularly in connection with quisque, may refer to some other word than the subject: suī cuique mōrēs fingunt fortunam, his own character fixes the lot of each one.

436. With the Accusative and Infinitive construction, sē and suus refer to the subject of the principal verb: Caesar dicit sē valēre, Caesar says that he is well.

437. In Final Clauses, Dependent Commands or Questions, reported Descriptions, Conditions, or Causes, with their verbs in the Subjunctive mood, sē or suus refers to the subject of the principal clause; in other clauses, it refers to the subject of its own clause: decima legiō Caesarī grātiās ēgit quod dē sē optimum iūdicium fēcisset, Caes. B. G. I. 41, the tenth legion tendered Caesar its thanks for having formed a high opinion of it; eō impetū militēs iērunt ut hostēs sē fugae mandārent, the soldiers charged with such impetuosity that the enemy betook themselves to flight.

438. Sē and suus are used when the subject is indefinite: dēforme est dē sē ipsō praedicāre, to boast of oneself is bad form.

RECIPROCAL PRONOUNS

439. The Latin has no reciprocal pronoun, but uses inter nōs, inter vōs, inter sē: virtūs et vitium inter sē differunt, virtue and vice differ from one another.

440. The same idea is expressed by alius (of several) and alter (of two): alius aliud videt, one sees one thing, another, another; alter alterum adiuvat, they two help each other.

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS

441. Hic as the Demonstrative of the first person points out something as near the speaker, in time, place, or thought; while iste is the regular demonstrative of the second person, and ille of the third: haec urbs, this city of ours; iste liber, that book of yours; ille homō, that man.

Hic

442. 1. Hic and ille often mark a contrast: hic . . . ille, the one . . . the other; the latter . . . the former.

2. Hic often, and ille sometimes, refers to what follows: Caesar lēgātōs cum his mandātis mittit, Caes. B. G. I. 35, Caesar sent ambassadors with the following instructions.

3. Hic is used as a demonstrative of the first person: dē his, Cic. Cat. II. 17. 3, concerning these; tālem hunc, Cic. Sull. 62. 5, such a man as this; dē hāc coniūrātiōne, Cic. Sull. 14. 3, concerning this recent conspiracy.

NOTE.—Hōc amicōrum numerō is regularly used for hōrum amicōrum numerō, in the number of these friends.

Ille

443. 1. Ille often means famous, well-known: sica illa, Cic. Cat. II. 1. 10, that famous dagger of his.

2. In a long sentence, or in the second of two parallel clauses, attention is often directed to some preceding noun by the insertion of ille:—

Arma virumque canō, Trōiāe quī primus ab ōris Ītaliā, fātō profugus Lāvinaque vēnit

Litora multum ille et terris iactātus et altō, Verg. Aen. I. 1–3,

I sing of arms and the hero who first from the shores of Troy came, by fate an exile, to Italy and the Lavinian shores, he, buffeted much both by land and sea.

Iste

444. Iste is regularly applied to an opponent in debate, often in contempt: istius furōrem, Cic. Cat. I. 2. 17, that wretch's fury.

Is

445. 1. Is, that, is the determinative pronoun. It is the regular antecedent of the relative: in eōs quī ea perficere voluērunt, Cic. Cat. IV. 12. 24, against those who have wanted to bring that to pass.

2. Is = tālis: neque enim is es, Cic. Cat. I. 22. 12, for you are not such a one.

3. It is a personal pronoun of the third person: ad eum accurrit, he runs up to him.

NOTE. — It is often omitted where the English would express it: ūnam, D. Silānī, Cic. Cat. IV. 7. 1, the one that of Decimus Silanus.

4. Note the phrase id quod, id being in apposition with a whole clause: habētis ūniversum populum Rōmānum, id quod in cīvili causā hodiernō diē primum vidēmus, ūnum atque idem sentientem, Cic. Cat. IV. 19. 18, you have the whole Roman people thinking one and the same thing, a thing which we see to-day for the first time in a matter of politics.

5. Note the phrase et ea, and that too: et ea per cīvēs, Cic. Cat. III. 21. 7, and that too through citizens.

6. Hic, ille, iste, and is usually take the gender of the predicate noun.

Īdem

446. 1. Īdem has the general force of the same, used as an adjective or a noun: nōn eadem est aetās, the age is not the same.

2. Īdem adds an additional predicate: quidquid ūtile est, idem est honestum, whatever is useful is honorable too.

3. Īdem sometimes has the translation of an adverb: dixi ego idem, Cic. Cat. I. 7. 15, I also said; et eandem dēlicātam, Cic. Mur. 20. 15, and sensual at that.

Iipse

447. Iipse in general expresses Eminence or Emphasis, and gets its force from the context, being often rendered by an emphatic he, or very, just, precisely, in person. It is used as a noun or an adjective: rēx ipse Aenēās, Verg. Aen. I. 575, king Aeneas in person; ipse haec vidī, I saw this with my own eyes.

RELATIVE PRONOUNS

448. The relative object may be omitted in English, but not in Latin: vir est quem vidisti, he is the man (whom) you saw.

449. In Latin, the antecedent sometimes has to be expressed: ex iis quae vidit, from what he saw.

450. The antecedent is often repeated in the relative clause with the relative as its attribute: (Caesar) intellēxit diem instāre quō diē frūmentum militibus mētiri oportēret, Caes. B. G. I. 16, Caesar saw that the day was at hand when corn was to be measured to the soldiers.

451. The antecedent may be implied in a possessive: vestrā enim quī cum summā ēlegantīā atque integritāte vixistis, Cic. Sull. 79. 26, for in the case of you who have lived with the greatest refinement and blamelessness.

452. An indefinite antecedent is often omitted: sunt quī haec dicant, there are some who say this.

INCORPORATION OF THE ANTECEDENT

453. The antecedent is sometimes attracted into the relative clause:—

1. When the relative clause precedes: quae civitās calamitātem populō Rōmānō intulerat, ea princeps poenās exsolvit, the state which had brought disaster on the Roman people was the chief one to pay the penalty.

2. When the antecedent is an appositive: firmī et cōstantēs amicī dēligendī sunt, cūius generis est māgna pēnūria, firm and constant friends should be chosen, of which class there is a great scarcity.

3. When the relative clause gives a personal characteristic as a reason: quae tua prūdentia est, with your usual foresight.

4. When the logical antecedent is a superlative: ex amicis quem habuit fidēlissimum ad rēgem misit, he sent to the king the most faithful friend he had.

454. 1. The relative is occasionally attracted into the case of the antecedent, particularly into the Ablative: nōs tamen hōc cōfirmāmus illō auguriō, quō diximus, yet we prove this by that augury which we have mentioned.

2. In poetry the antecedent may be attracted into the case of the relative: urbem quam statuō vestra est, Verg. Aen. I. 573, the city which I am building is yours.

455. A relative at the beginning of a clause has the force of a conjunction and a demonstrative: quā dē causā, and for this reason.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS (SEE 84)

456. For quis, see 84. 1.

Aliquis, some one, some, is more definite than quis: utī ē suis lēgātis aliquem ad sē mitteret, Caes. B. G. I. 47, that he should send him one of his lieutenants.

457. 1. Quīdam, a certain one, is even more definite than aliquis: accurrit quīdam, nōtus mihi nōmine tantum, Hor. Sat. I. 9. 3, a certain man runs up, known to me only by name.

2. With a noun or an adjective quīdam modifies a too bold use of language: et quōdam modō tacita loquitur, Cic. Cat. I. 18. 29, and though silent speaks in a manner, if I may be allowed to use the term.

458. Quisquam is usually found in sentences where a negative is expressed or implied: neque adhūc repertus est quisquam, Caes. B. G. III. 22, nor so far has any one been found; quamdiū quisquam erit, Cic. Cat. I. 6. 32, so long as there shall be any one.

NOTE.—With words denoting persons, Cicero uses quisquam as an adjective: homō liber quisquam, Cic. Sest. 78. 17, any free man.

459. Ūllus has the same use as an adjective that quisquam has as a noun: sine ūllā spē, without any hope. Ūllus has also a noun use.

460. Quisque, each one, has four common uses:—

1. With the reflexive, prō sē quisque, each one for himself.
2. With ordinals: tertiō quōque verbō, at every third word.
3. With relatives and interrogatives: quid quisque eōrum dē quāque rē audierit, Caes. B. G. IV. 5, what each one of them has heard about anything.

4. With superlatives it has a universal force: nōbilissimī cūiusque liberōs, Caes. B. G. I. 31, the children of all the nobles.

NOTE.—Quisque is used of several persons or things; the plural, of groups.

461. Uterque, Ambō.—Uterque always has a distinct reference to each of two things; the plural refers to groups, or is used with nouns that are found only in the plural. Ambō refers to two objects taken together: quī utrumque probat, ambōbus dēbuit ūtī, he who approves of each ought to have availed himself of both.

NOTE.—In poetry ambō is often used like duo.

462. Nēmō, no one, is found both with nouns and adjectives: nēmō mortālis, no mortal; nēmō civis, no citizen.

463. Cēteri, the rest, means all the others, while reliqui means the rest of.

CONJUNCTIONS

464. 1. Coördinating conjunctions join two words or phrases, two principal clauses, or two clauses that depend on the same principal clause.

2. Subordinating conjunctions join the dependent clause to the principal clause.

NOTES. — 1. -que and -ve, enclitics, are added to the second of two words they join, or to the first word of the second sentence or clause: arma virumque canō, Verg. Aen. I. 1, I sing of arms and a hero; quid tū es tristis, quidve es alacris? why are you sad, or why are you cheerful?

2. Atque is a strong connective and usually adds a more important to a less important statement: dīxerat; atque illam . . . aspiciunt, Verg. Aen. IV. 663, she ceased, and they behold her.

466. Note the correlative expressions nōn sōlum (modo) . . . sed etiam, not only . . . but also; nōn modo nōn . . . sed nē . . . quidem, not only not . . . but not even; nōn modo stantem non dēfendērunt, sed nē iacentem quidem prōtēxērunt, Cic. Sest. 64. 7, not only did not defend me standing, but did not protect me fallen.

467. In such expressions as nōn modo (sōlum) nōn . . . sed nē . . . quidem the latter nōn is generally omitted when the two negative clauses have the same verb: sapiēns vir nōn modo facere, sed nē cōgitāre quidem quicquam audēbit quod nōn honestum sit, a wise man will (not) dare not only to do, but not even to think anything that is not honorable.

468. In enumerations, where the several units are of equal importance, the connective is written between each two, or it may be omitted altogether, or -que may be attached to the last: māgnificē et graviter et animōsē vivere, or māgnificē, graviter, animōsē vivere, or māgnificē, graviter, animōsēque vivere, to live nobly, seriously, boldly.

469. When et or atque is placed between the last two only of several units, all that precede the connective are to be taken together: sī L. Catilīna subitō pertimuerit, sententiam mūtāverit, dēseruerit suōs, cōnsilium belli faciendī abiēcerit et converterit, Cic. Cat. II. 14. 2-7, now if Catiline not only suddenly becomes frightened, changes his mind, deserts his friends, and gives up his plan of making war, but also turns.

470. SUBORDINATING CONJUNCTIONS

1. CAUSE: because, since, quia, quod, quoniam, cum. Quod, the fact that, often introduces an object clause.
2. PURPOSE: in order that, that, to, ut (nō).
3. RESULT: so that, that, so as, ut (ut nōn).
4. CONDITION: if, si.
5. CONCESSION: although, quamquam, quamvis, cum.
6. TIME: when, cum, ubi, ut; as soon as, cum primum, simul atque; while, dum, donec; until, dum, donec; before, antequam, priusquam; after, postquam.
Interrogative when is quandō.

ORDER OF WORDS IN THE SENTENCE

471. The subject, unless an Infinitive, comes first, the predicate, last; the direct object precedes the predicate; the indirect precedes the direct: Caesar Aeduīs auxilium pollicitus est, Caesar promised aid to the Aeduans. The attributive adjective, Genitive, and appositive usually follow their nouns, while demonstratives and adjectives of quantity and number precede. An adverb or adverbial phrase immediately precedes the word it modifies. A preposition may have an attribute between it and its case, or the attribute may precede both the preposition and its case.

Relatives, interrogatives, and conjunctions introduce the clause in which they stand.

Temporal, causal, concessive, comparative, and conditional clauses precede the principal clause; final and consecutive clauses and indirect questions follow. The common subject or object of the principal and subordinate clause precedes both.

EXAMPLES ILLUSTRATING THE ABOVE PRINCIPLES

Aeduī, Rōmānōrum socii, cum sē suaque dēfendere nōn possent, lēgātōs mittunt, the Aeduans, allies of the Romans, since they could not defend themselves and their property, sent ambassadors. (This sentence illustrates the position of the appositive, the causal clause, and the common subject of the principal and subordinate clause): quibus dē causis, senātus duumvirōs ad eam aedem prō amplitūdine populī Rōmānī faciendam creārī iussit, for these reasons the senate ordered a commission of two to be appointed for building that temple in keeping with the dignity of the Roman people. (This sentence illustrates the position of an attribute with a preposition and its case, of relatives, of attributive adjectives, of demonstratives, of adjectives of number, and of the limiting Genitive): his rēbus fiēbat ut minus latē vagārentur, the result was that they could wander less widely (this sentence shows the position of the result clause and of the adverb). For emphasis, a word is put in some prominent position, usually first or last.

DEVICES TO SECURE EMPHASIS

472. Anáphora repeats the same word or word-order in successive phrases: nihilne tē nocturnum praesidium Palātī, nihil urbis vigillae, nihil timor populī, nihil concursus bonōrum omnium, nihil hic mūnitissimus habendī senātūs locus, nihil hōrum ōra vultūsque movērunt? Cic. Cat. I. 1. 7, has the nightly guard on the Palatine moved you in no way; the city watch in no way; the assemblage of all loyal men in no way; this most strongly fortified place of holding the senate in no way; the expression of countenance of all present in no way? (In translating it is better to break this up into short sentences.)

473. Chiásmus changes the relative order of words in contrasted clauses: frequentiā civium sustentātur, alitur ōtiō, Cic. Cat. IV. 17. 27, (business) is sustained by the crowd of citizens, is nurtured by ease.

The name comes from the criss-cross arrangement suggested by the Greek letter χ : $\begin{matrix} \text{frequenti\bar{a}} & \text{sustent\bar{a}tur} \\ \text{alitur} & \text{\bar{o}ti\delta} \end{matrix}$

474. Lítotes is the intentional use of a mild and negative form of expression for a very strong affirmative one: haud sēgnis, Verg. Aen. III. 513, not slothful. Compare the English: Shall I praise you in this? I praise you not, 1 Cor. 11. 22.

475. Írony makes a statement with the evident intention of expressing the opposite: nōs autem fortēs viri, Cic. Cat. I. 2. 17, but we, brave men = but we, shame on our cowardice!

476. Hypérbole is rhetorical exaggeration: occisus est cum liberis, M. Fulvius, Cic. Cat. I. 4. 6, Marcus Fulvius was slain with his children (though in reality but one child was slain).

477. Aposiopésis: where the sentence is incomplete, but the sense is clear: miscēre et tantās audētis tollere mōlēs? Quōs ego —! Verg. Aen. I. 134, do you dare to throw into confusion and stir up such masses (of water)? Whom I —!

FIGURES OF ETYMOLOGY

478. In Figures of Etymology there is a variation from the usual form of a word.

479. Sýncope is the omission of one or more letters within the word: onerārat = onerāverat, Verg. Aen. I. 195.

480. Apócope is the cutting off of a letter at the end of a word: Pyrrhīn' = Pyrrhīne, Verg. Aen. III. 319.

481. Árchaism is the use of an ancient form: ollī = illī, Verg. Aen. I. 254.

FIGURES OF SYNTAX

482. A variation from the usual structure of the sentence is a figure of Syntax.

483. Asyndeton is the omission of connectives.

484. Polysyndeton is the use of a connective between each two of a series.

485. Ellipsis is the omission of one or more words: Aeole, namque . . ., Verg. Aen. I. 65, Aeolus (on thee I call) for . . .

NOTE.—This ellipsis with nam is common in the Aeneid; see I. 318, 327, 390, 444, 453, 466, 589, 731, 755.

Ellipsis has a comparatively narrow range:—

1. Parts of the verb to be, especially est, sunt, and esse.
2. The indefinite antecedent of the relative.
3. When a word has already been used in the context, it may be understood in the same or another form.
4. In familiar phrases a part is sometimes omitted: verbum sat = verbum satis est sapientibus.

486. Zeúgma makes one verb do the duty of two: inclūsōs . . . Danaōs et . . . laxat claustra, Verg. Aen. II. 258–9, releases the imprisoned Greeks and loosens the bars.

487. Pléonasm is unnecessary fullness of expression: apud mē domī, Cic. Sest. 41. 19, at my house at home.

488. Hendíadys is the use of two coördinate nouns instead of one noun with a modifier: ōra vultūsque, Cic. Cat. I. 1. 7, the expression on the faces.

489. Anacolúthon is a break in the regular construction: utinam dī immortalēs fēcissent (pāce tuā, patria, dixerim; metuō enim nē scelerātē dīcam in tē quod prō Milōne dīcam piē), uti- nam P. Clōdīus nōn modo viveret, sed etiam praetor, cōnsul, dīc-tātor esset potius, quam hōc spectāculum vidērem! Cic. Mil. 103. 1. (Here we would naturally expect to have ut vīveret depending on the fēcissent clause; but instead we have a change in the construction to utinam vīveret.)

490. Hýsteron Próteron inverts the natural order of words and clauses: in Āfricam redire atque Italiā dēcēdere, Cic. Cat. IV. 21. 16, to return into Africa and withdraw from Italy. (Compare our "I put on my shoes and socks.")

491. Prolépsis anticipates the use of a word: submersās obrue puppēs, Verg. Aen. I. 69, swamp the sunken ships. (Compare the English "I know thee who thou art.")

492. Tmésis consists in the separation of the parts of a compound word by some other word or words: dare braccia circum, Verg. Aen. II. 792, to throw his arms around.

FIGURES OF RHETORIC

493. For Litotes, Irony, Hyperbole, Aposiopesis, see 474-477.

494. Oxymóron combines contradictory ideas: pictūrā pāscit ināni, Verg. Aen. I. 464, he feeds on the unsubstantial picture; splendidē mendāx, Hor. Od. III. 11. 35, gloriously false.

495. Alliteration is a succession of words beginning with the same sound: cavum conversā cuspidē, Verg. Aen. I. 81.

496. Onomatopóeia is accommodation of sound to sense: luctantēs ventōs tempestātēsque sonōrās, Verg. Aen. I. 53, wrestling winds and sounding storms.

497. Hypallage is generally seen in an adjective which is made to agree with a word to which it does not logically belong: dolentem nōn purpurārum sidere clārior dēlēnit ūsus, the use of purple garments more brilliant than a constellation soothes not the sufferer (here clārior agrees with ūsus, but logically goes with purpurārum).

The essence of this figure is Personification, one of the most common marks of poetic style.

THE ROMAN CALENDAR

498. Dates are reckoned from three points:—

1. The Kalends (Kalendae), the first of the month.
2. The Nones (Nōnae), the fifth; but in March, May, July, October, the seventh.
3. The Ides (Idūs), the thirteenth; but in March, May, July, October, the fifteenth.

The names of the months are expressed by adjectives. When used as nouns, mēnsis, month, is understood; but usually they agree with Kalendae, Nōnae, Idūs.

These adjectives are Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius, Aprīlis, Māius, Iūnius, Iūlius, Augustus, Septēber, Octōber, Novēber, Decēber.

NOTE.—The year originally began with March; hence, prior to 46 B.C., Iūlius was Quīntīlis and Augustus was Sextīlis.

499. Intervening days are reckoned as so many days before the following Kalends, Nones, or Ides, as the case may be, both the day of the beginning and the close of the count being included; thus, December 29th is the fourth day before the Kalends of January.

500. The day before any one of these periods is prīdiē: prīdiē Kalendās Iānuāriās (prid. Kal. Ian.) is December 31st.

501. Various methods of indicating dates: —

1. diē quartō ante Nōnās Māiās, (May 4th).
2. quartō ante Nōnās Māiās, (May 4th).
3. quartō (iv) Nōnās Māiās, (May 4th).
4. ante diem quartum (iv) Nōnās Māiās, (May 4th).

The last is the most common method.

These phrases may be considered as nouns, and may be preceded by the prepositions ad, ex, in: ex ante diem tertium Nōnās Iūniās usque ad pridie Kalendās Octōbrēs, from June 3d to September 30th.

502. In letters, the date is placed at the end, and is written in either of two ways: a. d. vi. Kal. Dec. (= ante diem sextum Kalendās Decembrēs), or vi. Kal. Dec. (= sextō (diē ante) Kalendās Decembrēs), November 26th.

TO PUT A ROMAN DATE INTO ENGLISH

503. For a date preceding the Nones or Ides, add one to the date on which the Nones or the Ides fall and subtract the given numeral: a. d. iii. Nōn. Decembr., Cic. Ep. Att. I. 13, December 3d; tertiō Idūs Februār., Cic. Ep. Att. V. 21, February 11th.

504. In Leap year, the extra day in February was the 25th, designated as ante diem bis. vi. Kal. Mārt., while the 24th was ante diem vi. Kal. Mārt.

505. For a date preceding the Kalends, add two to the number of days in the preceding month and subtract the given numeral: meministine mē ante diem xii. Kalendās Novembrēs dicere? Cic. Cat. I. 7. 10, do you not remember that on the 21st of October I said? dixi . . . tē caedem . . . contulisse in ante diem v. Kalendās Novembrēs, Cic. Cat. I. 7. 16, I said that you had set the massacre for October 28th.

PRAENOMINA

507. A Roman had three names, a praenōmen, a nōmen, a cōgnōmen. The praenōmen was the personal name; the nōmen was the name of the gēns; and the cōgnōmen was the family name: thus, in Pūblius Vergilius Marō, Pūblius is the individual of the gēns known as Vergilian and of the family Maro.

508. Praenōmina and their abbreviations:—

A.	= Aulus	M'	= Mānius
App.	= Appius	N.	= Numerius
C.	= Gāius	P.	= Pūblius
Cn.	= Gnaeus	Q.	= Quīntus

VERSIFICATION

509. Latin Versification is based on Quantity. Syllables are harmoniously combined into feet and feet into verses. A Latin verse, then, is a regular combination of long and short syllables.

510. The metrical unit is the short syllable (∪ or ♪). A long syllable (— or ♫) is equivalent to two short syllables.

511. Ictus is the prominence given the long syllable in every foot. The syllable receiving the ictus is the Thesis; the rest of the foot the Arsis.

PRINCIPAL FEET

512. Dactyl, — ∪ ∪; Spondee, — —; Anapaest, ∪ ∪ —; Iambus, ∪ —; Trochee, — ∪.

513. The different kinds of verse take the name of the foot which is their basis; as, Anapaestic, Dactylic, Iambic, Trochaic.

FIGURES OF PROSODY

514. Elision is the omission of a final vowel or diphthong, or of a final m with the preceding vowel, before a word beginning with a vowel or h. If the second of the two words is est, its vowel is lost and the two words are run together in pronunciation.

515. Hiátus, omission of Elision, occurs when one word ends in a vowel and the next begins with a vowel or h.

516. Diástole is the lengthening of a short syllable to its original quantity.

517. Sýstole is the shortening of a long syllable to its original quantity.

518. Hardening is giving the vowels i and u their consonantal force. For Syncope and Tmesis, see 480 and 492.

519. Synizésis or Synaéresis is the union of two vowels by a slur.

520. Synaphéia is the elision of a final short vowel before the initial vowel of the next line.

521. Caesúra is the ending of a word within a foot. In dactylic hexameter, the principal or masculine caesura falls after the thesis of the foot, while the feminine caesura comes between the short syllables of the foot. The usual caesura is in the third foot.

522. Diaéresis is the pause which occurs when the end of a word and the end of a foot coincide. In hexameter verse, the diaeresis at the end of the fourth foot is called the Bucolic diaeresis.

DACTYLIC (HEROIC) HEXAMETER

523. The Dactylic Hexameter in theory contains six Dactyls, but a spondee often takes the place of the dactyl in the first four feet. The sixth foot may be a spondee or a trochee.

If the fifth foot is a spondee, the verse is called spondaic.

SCANNING OR RHYTHMICAL READING

524. In Latin, as in English, scanning must be by blocks.

Ārmă vi|rŭmquē cǎ|nō || Trō|iaē quī | prĭmŭs āb | ōris

Verg. Aen. I. 1-7.

NOTE. — In the metrical scheme given above, the marks of quantity (—, ∪) refer to the syllable; the accent above the line indicates the Ictus; the vertical line marks the division into feet, while the parallel lines mark the Caesural pause.

525. Points to remember in Dactylic Hexameter:—

1. The first syllable of each foot must be long.
2. A syllable between two long syllables must be long.
3. Except at the end of a line, a short syllable must be preceded or followed by a short syllable.

EXAMPLE OF HIATUS

Pōsthābi|tā cōlū|issē || Sā|mō: hic|illius|ārmā, Verg. Aen. I. 16,

(the hiatus consists in not eliding the final vowel of Samō before hic).

ELEGIAC DISTICH

526. The Elegiac Distich consists of a dactylic hexameter and a pentameter. The pentameter may be considered as a hexameter which has lost the arsis of the third and sixth feet: — ∪ ∪ | — ∪ ∪ | ⊔ || — ∪ ∪ | — ∪ ∪ | — ¯.

The mark (⊔) indicates a long syllable (two units) prolonged to the value of four; ¯ indicates the lack of two units at the end.

ROMAN MEASURES

MONEY

527. Up to about 268 B.C. the unit was the ās, a copper coin, in theory equal to a pound (libra), and divided into twelve ūnciae. The sēstertius (HS or IIS), a silver coin, equal to $2\frac{1}{2}$ āsēs, then became the unit, though the dēnārius, equal to 4 sesterces, was the coin in most common use.

Rules for stating Sums of Money

528. 1. Up to 1000 sesterces, use a cardinal with sēs-tertii: decem sēstertii, 10 sesterces.

2. From 2000 to 900,000, use a distributive with sēstertia: dēna sēstertia (mīlia being understood) 10,000 sesterces.

3. From 1,000,000 sesterces upwards, use an adverbial with sēstertium (centēna mīlia being understood): decies sēstertium, 1,000,000 sesterces.

NOTES. — 1. Sēstertium was a sum of money, not a coin. It was the Genitive plural of sēstertius, but was also declined as if it were a neuter noun.

2. The bullion value of a sēstertius was about four cents.

529. Interest. — Interest was counted by the month, at so many hundredths of the principal: ūsūrae bīnae centēsimae, two per cent per month. Lower rates were expressed by fractions of the ās: ūsūrae sēmisse, one-half per cent per month.

530. LENGTH

1 pēs = 11.65 inches

1 passus = 5 pedēs

mille passuum = 1 mile = 5000 pedēs = 4850 English feet

The unit of measure of land was the iūgerum, 240 feet long and 120 feet broad

531. CAPACITY

1 sextārius = almost 1 pint

1 congius = 6 sextārii

1 modius = 16 sextārii

1 amphora = 8 congi

Coy's Latin Lessons

FOR BEGINNERS

BY

E. W. COY, P. H. D.

Principal of Hughes High School, Cincinnati

Cloth, 12mo, 330 pages. Price, $1.00

This new book for beginners in Latin has been prepared to meet the demand for introductory lessons combining an early development of the reading power with thorough drill in the essentials of the grammar. It is intended to prepare the student to read different Latin writers in the course, and is therefore based upon selections from several authors and not from one alone. The following are some of the leading distinctive features of the work:

1. The marking of the accent of paradigms, insuring a correct pronunciation from the beginning.
2. The use of heavier type to show the tense signs of verbs and the endings of nouns and adjectives.
3. The logical and clear treatment of verb-formation, similar forms being grouped together, and their resemblances pointed out.
4. The frequent and thorough reviews.
5. The systematic study of English derivatives and allied and synonymous Latin words and phrases.
6. The exercises in sight reading and in composition based upon the text already read.
7. The appendix of tabulated rules and paradigms.
8. The early introduction of connected Latin reading adapted to the capacity of the beginner and interesting in subject-matter.
9. The liberal training in the reading of good Latin selected from Viri Romæ, Cæsar, and Nepos, and the consequent thorough preparation for the second year's work.

First Latin Readings

An Equivalent for Cæsar

By R. ARROWSMITH, PH.D.

Professor of Latin and Greek, Teachers College, New York City

AND

G. M. WHICHER, M.A.

Instructor in Classics, Packer Collegiate Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Cloth, 12mo, 344 pages. Price, $1.25

This work has been prepared in response to a growing demand for a new first reading book in Latin, offering more simple and interesting material for the second-year work than is now provided by Cæsar's Commentaries, the first connected reading pupils meet in the Latin course.

It is the aim of the present volume to offer for the student's first reading in Latin, material in which the least, rather than the more, difficult Latin comes first; which contains the largest possible general vocabulary, instead of a small special vocabulary; which is drawn from a wide, instead of a narrow, range of literature; and which may be associated with other departments of teaching with greater success and productiveness than Cæsar's Commentaries.

The selections in First Latin Readings have, therefore, been chosen with reference to their difficulty, their interest as literature, and, as far as possible, their relation to Roman life and custom, and not with reference to their exclusive use as drilling material on formal classical construction.

Exercises in Latin prose composition, based on the text of each author represented, have been prepared, and are included in the book.
